Goldberg Appointed Ambassador to UN

Mrs. Hearnes Wants Year Around Aid

"We just hope that this can be set up on a year around basis."

Thats what the First Lady of the state, Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, said yesterday about the head start program as she inspected the project in Sikeston.

She was accompanied from Jefferson City by Kenneth Rashid of Washington, D. C., regional director of the program; Phil Maher, Missouri director of the economic opportunity program and Randolph Halsy of his office in Jefferson City.

They made three inspections other than the one at Sikeston. They stopped at Caruthersville, Springfield and Columbia on a flying trip.

Mrs. Hearnes said that she was pleased with the program in Sikeston.

"You have good teachers," she said.

"I think this program is filling a long felt need. I have toured other places and everywhere I go I can see the need for the program is very large."

Rashid said:

"There will be results and accomplishments in the children that we may not see for four to five years. This program is called head start and for a good reason. The children who participate will be just eight weeks ahead of the children, who need the program but haven't been able to take part.

"There are 11 states in this region. However, Missouri would have to determine a leader in forming the program.

"Our purpose today is to see if the schools are doing what they were directed to do and so far every school that I have inspected has done much more than fill the essential requirements.

"We see these accomplishments and it encourages us to set the program up the year around."

In the program at Sikeston there are 160 students taking part.

In the state, 424 schools in 75 different counties are training 12,529 children.

District Split Studied

BENTON — The Scott County School board will meet Thursday night at the court house to explore possibilities of dividing the county into two school districts.

G. K. Patterson, president of the county board, said yesterday that a plan has not been submitted to the county board on the division plan.

He said "at the last meeting of the County Board, we proposed that each school district submit a plan to the board for re-organization. But, as to date, none have been received.

"The main gist of the talk that has been going around is that the boundary would be the Baseline Road. But, there is nothing concrete.

He said this about the beginning of the plan:

"The R-4 School District's (Kelly) Board president Tom Arnold wants the two districts, north and south. The state is after that district to build new buildings for their grade school program. This is what that district is wanting to get around.

"Oran, Chaffee and Illmo-Scott City are on record as being opposed to the redistricting."

Patterson was asked if he thought Sikeston, R-6, was interested in the redistricting.

He said, "Yes, but I don't know why Sikeston is wanting to participate.

"Although I wasn't present at the last meeting concerning redistricting, I understand that Harold Kiehne, Sikeston director of secondary education, put a motion on the floor in favor of the county being divided into north and south districts."

County Superintendent Ward Brasher, who is secretary to the county board, would not divulge the minutes of the May 17 meeting.

He said at first:

"I don't have the minutes in the proper form, but I can tell you what went on, which is simply everyone, (school districts), was asked to submit a plan to the county board."

He then said:

"I can't find the minutes of the meeting. They must have been misfiled somewhere."

The redistricting would mean that a new high school would have to be built in the north district, costing about one million dollars.

The bonding capacity, if the districts are divided at the Baseline Road would be around $450,000.

Rotary Club Gets Lesson In Printing

Rotarians learned about printing last night at their meeting in the Holiday Inn.

Allen Blanton, commercial printing manager of the Daily Standard, told the club that the Standard has five presses, two offset and the remainder letterpress.

He said that in the letterpress method printing is direct from type and that in the offset method the image is transferred to a blanket and the printing is from the blanket.

He described hot and cold type composition and used exhibits to explain. The Color King offset press used to print the newspaper and large commercial printing orders has a capacity of 16 full size newspaper pages and it can print in four colors in a single operation.

Hot type is either composed one letter at a time or in single lines as on a linecasting machine. In cold type composition, Blanton said, the alphabet is on film disk in a contact printer. The desired letters are exposed in sequence and a picture is taken of the line with the machine which can be pasted on a page. This is how headlines and large type are composed.

Smaller type is set by a process like typing and coded tape is fed into a machine which produces lines of printed material in black ink on white paper. These lines also are pasted on paper with wax.

When printed matter is pasted on a page a photograph is taken of it. The negative is exposed to an offset plate.

The Standard's camera can enlarge a picture up to 200 per cent and reduce one up to 50 per cent.

The Standard, Blanton said, is equipped to print anything from a small business card to a 22 inch by 28 inch placard. He invited the club to visit the plant and observe printing processes.

Max Smotherman, vocational instructor in the multi-occupations facility, said that four pair of eye glasses were needed by trainees. He asked the Rotary club to buy one pair of the glasses and said that the trainee would pay for them in weekly payments.

Harry C. Voght, Ellington, district governor of Rotary International, will make his official visit to the Rotary club at its meeting next Monday at 6 p.m. at the Holiday Inn. He will hold a club assembly during which club committee chairmen will tell their plans for the coming year's activities.

Mrs. Voght will meet with wives of Rotarians in another room at the Holiday Inn and will show pictures of her travels, club president Lucien Stoner announced.

Voght, a past president of his club, is area supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Last night's meeting was attended by two visiting Rotarians, Galen Ferrell and Paul Hill of the Charleston club; First Lt. Roy W. Clinton, stationed with a special services group in Viet Nam, a guest of Bill Jones; Harold Ploy, a student from Salzburg, Austria, a guest of James Green; Friederich Scheuer, Graz, Austria, student, a guest of Lennie Whitworth; Scout Executive Eddie Schrader a guest of Green. Richard Smith introduced his future son-in-law, Arthur Hobbs of Kansas City.

450 Days Assessed

Judge M. E. Montgomery handed down a total of 450 days in jail sentences in this morning's session of Magistrate Court.

210 days of the jail sentences were on charges of fraudulent check writing.

Troy Ward, 307 Greer, was sentenced to a suspended 30 day jail term upon payment of court costs on the charges of writing $25 fraudulent checks.

Dorothy Pyke, 908 Ruth, pleaded guilty to three charges of fradulent checks. On each charge she was given a 30 day suspended jail sentence.

On the first charge, writing a fradulent check for $28.70, she was fined $28.70 and costs; a $9.80 fraudulent check brought a fine of $9.80 and costs; and a third fraudulent check for $9 drew a fine of $9 and costs.

Edward Pyke, 908 Ruth, was given a 30 day suspended jail term and was fined $8.19 and costs for writing a fraudulent check for $8.19.

Fred Castleberry, 522 Sikes, was given a 30 day suspended jail sentence and was fined $9.58 and cost for writing a fraudulent check for $9.58.

He was given a second 30 day suspended jail term and was fined $12.28 and costs for writing a $12.28 fraudulent check.

Faye Kirkpatrick, Benton, had the charge of fraudulent check writing continued for two weeks to obtain legal advice.

William Campbell, Fenton, was fined $5 and costs for having no operator-s license.

Calvin Clements, 235 N. Handy, was fined $5 and costs for having an improper muffler on vehicle.

He pleaded innocent to charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and disturbing the peace by use of loud and profane language and the cases were continued for one week.

Brit Johnson, Fulton, Ky., was fined $50 and costs and was sentenced to a 90 day jail term for driving while under the influence of liquor.

Edward and Clarence McClain, Canalou, were sentenced to 30 days in the county jail for stealing watermelons and were fined $10 and costs.

Jewell Marshall, Tommy Richards, and Earl Howard, all of Sikeston, were sentenced to 30 days in the county jail for stealing watermelons and each was fined $10 and costs.

Kenneth Counts and Earl Cagel of Charleston were fined $50 and costs for being minors in possession of liquor.

Virlee King, 1120 N. Compton, was fined $10 and costs for driving with no operators license.

She pleaded innocent to the charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and the case was continued for one week.

James Vaughn, Gary Bean, Elmer Glenn and Charles Kruse, all of Dexter, were fined $50 and costs for being in possession of liquor while being minors. Half the fine was stayed pending good behavior.

Luther Lamborn, and Harry Cagle, both of Charleston, were fined $50 and costs and were sentenced to 30 days in the county jail for being minors in possession of liquor.

LBJ's Move Surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson named Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg today to be the new U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

In a quickly arranged ceremony in the White House rose garden, the President, with Goldberg at his side, named his choice to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson.

Goldberg said the message of Adlai Stevenson to the world must continue — man's ancient supplication to "grant us peace."

And he promised to attempt to bring "the rule of law to relations between the various nations — it is that or doom and we all know that," Goldberg said.

The selection came as a surprise. Speculation had centered on the idea of a Cabinet reshuffle.

Congressional informants said Monday Johnson might offer the U.N. post to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and they thought Rusk might be receptive.

Some of the talk revolved around the idea of shifting Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to the State Department.

Goldberg was the late President Kennedy's first appointment to the Supreme Court. Before that he served in the Cabinet as secretary of labor, after a long career as a labor lawyer.

Floods Roar Through Missouri

Roaring floodwaters created by rains of more than 12 inches over portions of northwest and west central Missouri swept through a number of small towns north and east of Kansas City today.

Several persons were reported lost or missing in the floodwaters overnight in the Smithville and Holden areas. Homes were washed off their foundations at Smithville and Edgerton and at least two house trailers were washed away at Riverside.

Bloomfield Publisher Dies

BLOOMFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Fred W. Koenig, 57, newspaper publisher, civic leader and businessman, died of an apparent heart attack early today while en route to a Cape Girardeau hospital by ambulance.

Koenig had just completed a column for the Bloomfield Vindicator, which he edited and published, when he became ill.

He formerly had worked for newspapers in St. Louis and Belleville and Carbondale, Ill. He was a Bloomfield city councilman and president of the city's Chamber of Commerce.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Estelle Koenig, and three sisters.

School Begins At Risco

RISCO — Risco Schools began the 1965-66 school term Monday with students registering for classes and checking out books and supplies.

Normal school operations in the district began today with buses making regular runs, service by the school cafeteria, and classes meeting for normal sessions.

A. L. Bates, superintendent, has said that he still needs to hire a music director for the high school and an elementary teacher to make his staff of instructors complete.

Superintendent Bates released the following names of teachers who are employed by the district and who began work today:

Elementary teachers—Brenda Atchley, Avanelle Conner, Francey Fortner, Kathryn Fortner, Irene Headd, Dora Keaster, Laquita McCulloch, Nina Martin, Camille Newingham, Doris Pearson, Patricia Ray, and Amy Sexton.

High School teachers — Doris Blough, Ralph W. Blough, Reta Butler, William E. Gordon, Robert Harris, Frances Hayes, Finis L. Howell, Aubrie Lackie, Vallie Patterson, Doris Schuerenberg, William R. Shoat, and Marie Weston.

Teachers who will be serving their first year in the Risco District are Brenda Atchley, Frances Hayes, Irene Headd, Finis L. Howell, and Doris Schuerenberg.

Don J. Brewer will serve another year as high school principal, and Roy T. Hen will be the elementary principal.

Thirteen Queens Selected

Thirteen young women from Sikeston have been selected by the SEMO Shriners as queens for the 10th annual horse show July 31 in the rodeo arena.

Each queen will present cash prizes, trophies, and ribbons to winners in one of the 13 different categories in two classes, society and western.

The events, the queens and their sponsors are:

Three gaited -- Judy Sidwell, 17, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Sidwell; First National Bank.

Approval Given Nurse Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretaries of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare today approved a $207,351 grant to the Sikeston public schools for its third class this year in practical nursing.

Under auspices of the Manpower Development Training program, $145,050 will be used for training allowances and $62,301 for training costs, Senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long announced.

The 26-member practical nursing class will begin Monday, Administrative Assistant at the public schools, Harold Vogel, said. Another group of 26 will begin training in April he reported.

Taught by Mrs. Clara Eisenbach, a registered nurse, this is the third year the program has been operative in Sikeston. Two classes have been held earlier this year.

Four Hurt, Blame Speed

All Bootheel highway injuries reported for Monday came in two accidents near Poplar Bluff, attributed to speeding.

Three teenagers were injured in one of the accidents and one in another, the state highway patrol reported.

The three were injured in an accident two miles north of Fisk Sunday at 7 p.m. on county highway DD.

A 1965 Chevrolet pickup, driven by Vernice Howe, 17, Fisk, was rounding a curve when it left the roadway and struck a utility pole. Howe received a broken left arm and head cuts. He was taken to the Doctor's Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Two passengers, Rick Adams, 15, Fisk, received a possible back injury and was taken to the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Rex Hancock, 15, Fisk, received head scrapes and a neck injury. He was taken to the Doctor's Hospital.

A 1964 Chevrolet pickup truck, driven by Charles St. Cin, 34, route four, Poplar Bluff, ran off a road two miles south of Poplar Bluff at 9 p.m. Monday and struck a tree. His face was cut and he suffered a possible chest injury. He was taken to Doctor's Hospital.

Situation Worse

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said today the Vietnamese situation has deteriorated in many aspects in the last 15 months, but the picture is not all black. Then he headed home from his five-day survey to report to President Johnson.

Inner Enemy Fells Beatty

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — "I want people to see me close," Clyde Beaty used to say. "I'll give them anything. I'll give them everything. But not that one thing . . . I won't give my life."

And he didn't.

The famed wild-animal trainer, his body criss-crossed with claw and fang marks from 40 years of facing death in the ring, lost his battle Monday to an inner enemy — cancer.

Water District Vote July 31

U.S. Grants Funds for Caruthersville Project

CARUTHERSVILLE —Mayor B. F. Rogers received a telegram Monday, announcing the approval of $22,656 from the Community Facilities Administration in Washington D.C., as a final payment on an engineering design in planning a $908,000 sewerage system.

The loan was made available because Caruthersville's location on the Mississippi river makes a special system necessary to send sewage away from the stream.

The city has been operating under a special permit to let their sewage into the river but the engineering firm of Owens and White, Baton Rouge, La., will now be able to complete plans to divert sewage from one to two miles from the city into a lagoon system.

Two years ago the city approved a $484,000 revenue bond issue, and an additional $424,000 is being sought from different federal agencies. With the approval of the new public works bill, the city will be able to complete the sewerage project.

The project is expected to get underway in 1966. It will include new trunk lines, four lift stations, and changing of many old, inadequate lines. About 30 per cent of the city is without sewer lines. The area would be added to the new project.

Working with the city administration to get this project completed were Sen. Stuart Symington, and Cong. Paul Jones, Kennett Democrat, who made special efforts in pushing river pollution bills in congress. Grants will be forthcoming from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

She-Angel Trumpeter on Christmas Stamp

WASHINGTON AP -- A postal inspection shows that it will be Gabrielle -- not Gabriel -- who will be blowing the trumpet on this year's Christmas postage stamps.

The figure of the winged trumpeter is that of a she-angel.

The Post Office Department announced last week that the stamp has been selected from a detail of a 1930 watercolor by Lucille Gloria Chabot. The painting, now on display at the National Gallery of Art, portrays the 1840 Gabriel weather vane atop the People's Methodist church in Newburyport, Mass.

After reading about the Post Office announcement identifying the yule trumpeter as the Archangel Gabriel, Morris Gordon of Bridgeport, Conn., wrote a letter to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski.

Gordon told Gronouski that "the torso part of the figure is feminine, and Gabriel's breast is that of a woman."

Gronouski dispatched an investigator to Newburyport. He reported that "when viewed through binoculars, it can be observed that the questioned section of the design has a very definite protrusion."

A biblical expert at the Catholic University of America, the Rev. Louis Hartman, explained the bulge this way: "Theologians tend to use anthropomorphism in describing God and the angels. In other words, they refer to these figures in masculine terms.

"But it has been traditional for religious artists to picture the angel with an effeminate and female aura, substance or form, although no one knows why."

Printing orders have been issued for 1.2 billion of the five-cent stamps.

Newspapermen are not cast in a mold. They are an independent breed. This is true despite the tendencies by men in public life to generalize in their criticism of the press as if it were one and of Democratic politicians -- at least those of yesteryear-- to lambast the "one party press." All labels are meaningless and nonsense.

One of the nation's publishers who speaks his own mind is William Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union Leader in New Hampshire. His voice doesn't sound like those normally heard from the taciturn, independent Yankees of rock ribbed New England. It isn't either.

Loeb long ago withdrew from the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers Association. Recently he has urged the legislature to approve a bill, strongly opposed by the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers' association.

The bill would prevent the importation of professional strike-breakers into the state during labor troubles at newspaper plants and other establishments.

Daily newspapers are held by the federal government to be in interstate commerce but the International Typographical Union for purely selfish and obvious reasons is trying to remove them from this category as far as employment practices are concerned in a strike.

Loeb's condescending attitude toward the union may cause the printer's union and the other unions with which he deals to treat him more kindly in negotiations. There is no evidence that this will be the case. Unions have fought just as vigorously against their friends in management, who have been generally sympathetic to their point of view, as those who have vigorously opposed them in everything they have wanted step by step. Some newspaper men who have been soft on unions and who have championed their causes in the past are no longer in business. They are fallen targets of overwhelming and unreasoning union power, supported 100 per cent by a sympathetic federal government.

If Loeb's newspaper is ever struck by a union making unreasonable demands -- and many publishers have been he won't get any sympathy from anyone. He isn't entitled to any.

He is making the assumption that this won't happen, but the cemeteries are full of people who didn't think it would "happen to me."

Loeb says that he isn't interested in doing away with union representation" but if he cannot hire replacements during a strike he cannot win that strike regardless of how much merit there is on his side.

Union members have the right to strike. There is no argument about that.

But labor - management relations must become a two-way street if they are to be either fair or durable. Management should have an equal right to win a strike.

The only way that any newspaper publisher can win a strike is by continuing to publish. Any other course makes him the victim of any demand, however unfair, unreasonable and unrealistic it may be, by his employes.

This is the reason that all but two New York newspapers are fighting desperately for their lives. These papers are swimming in red ink in the futile effort to pay for exorbitant demands by the printers union, which won't permit any automation unless they are paid in addition any financial benefits resulting from the use of new printing methods. The newspapers cannot win a strike under present conditions.

If his newspaper is struck Loeb will learn quickly that he cannot hire any printers in Manchester or in New Hampshire regardless of how much they sympathize with his plight.

He won't be able to do this because any replacements will be frightened. There are easier ways of making a living than going through a picket line. The minimum expectation is a vile tongue lashing. There are others -- fear of violence to a person and to his property or a combination of the two and fear of other forms of retaliation, such as jeopardized future employment.

Under these circumstances Loeb would welcome the appearance of so-called out-of-state strikebreakers. When he needs them, he needn't look our way for understanding and sympathy. The New England Publishers' Association will turn a much colder shoulder in his direction.

Loeb is carelessly throwing away his own rights in his zeal to protect the rights of his employes. He is engaging in brinkmanship on a high wire. There is no net beneath.

SCRATCHING THE SURFACE

It would appear that Robert G. Baker's $19,600 a year job in the Senate as secretary of the majority - which he resigned under fire last October - was small potatoes compared with his extra curricular activities.

Senate interest in his private affairs began when a $300,000 suit charging abuse of political influence in a vending machine deal was brought against him. Asked informally to explain this and reports of other business activities, Mr. Baker resigned and the current investigation by the Senate Rules Committee followed. While the probe has, thusfar, concerned itself entirely with the operations of Mr. Baker, it was ordered by the Senate to include investigation of the outside business interests of all Senate employees, both past and present. Just how far this may go and what the scope of involvements may be, remains to be seen.

That Mr. Baker was a busy man is indicated by reports credited to an unofficial but reliable source that he claimed in July 1962 to own assets worth more than a-million-and-a-half, made up mostly of securities and real estate.

After two days of closed door meetings, came the first public hearing, at which Mrs. Gertrude C. Novak, widow of a former partner of Mr. Baker's, testified that she and her husband bought stock on his advice and made a profit of $54,889 a year later, and which, by agreement, they split with Mr. Baker. She "assumed," Mrs. Novak said, that the Baker tip was based on "inside information" of a quick rise.

The Novaks were also partners with Mr. Baker in the swank, million dollar Carousel Motel at Ocean City, Md., which was a financial failure.

In her three-and-a-half hours of testimony, which occupied the entire session, Mrs. Novak told of being frightened at the large amounts of cash - as much as $13,000 - that Baker had turned over to her from time to time for deposit to the Carousel account.

It appears that there will be a considerable intermission before we see the next act of the Bobby Baker extravaganza, since Chief Counsel McLendon has said the Committee investigators may not finish their work until February. He also said hearings might go on for quite a while after that.

But it should be worth waiting for.

HIS REQUEST

The preacher in the small Southern town was giving his congregation plenty of fire and brimstone about the sinful life they were leading.

He finally shouted at his flock, "You'r sinful, sinful! Why, I don't believe that among the young ladies here there's one single virgin!" He glanced around with a challenge in his eye. "If there's a virgin in this congregation let her stand up!"

Finally, in the rear of the church a young married woman holding a baby in her arms got to her feet.

The minister sputtered. "M'am, I don't think you understood my demand. I said if there was a virgin in the congregation she should stand up."

"I understood, Reverend," the woman answered, "but you wouldn't want this two-month old girl to stand by herself, would you?"

TRENDS: According to the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear, enough striped blazers have been seen this season thus far to believe that this old-new fashion will be strongly revived. The conventional flannel will probably emerge the favorite, though the stripes are being shown in tweeds and in innumerable wash-and-wear fabrics . . . White -- in suits, jackets, slacks, walk shorts and formal jackets -- are even more popular this year. Many of the major men's stores believe they'll be bigger than ever before.

LET THE PEOPLE THINK

"The only effective solution" to the decay of the dollar, "is drastically to reduce spending says the Citizens Foreign Aid Committee, of Washington, D. It need not plead with anyone; it needs no new restrictive legislation to hamstring business; it need not discourage private investment abroad. The termination of deficit spending will restore confidence in the dollar; it will arrest the flight of gold; it will prevent further dollar decay."

The population explosion is losing some of its steam in the United States.

According to statisticians the number of births decreased moderately in 1963, and at the year's end will be somewhat below the 1957 record peak of 4,300,000. Nevertheless, 1963, which will record a total of about 4,100,000 births, marks the tenth year in succession that births have exceeded four million.

Despite the recent declines, the rate for second births in 1963 will be only about one-sixth below the high point reached in 1949. Second births, which had numbered more than one million a year since 1947, are expected to fall slightly below that level this year, the statisticians report.

Third and subsequent births have been accounting for an increasing proportion of the total, from 38 percent in 1950 to about 49 percent now. The statisticians attribute this to the sustained high rate for third and fourth children.

For third births, the rate has been at least 30 per 1,000 married women under age 45 for more than a decade. The rate for fourth children has risen to about 20 per 1,000 in recent years. Fifth and higher order of births, too, have reached relatively high levels. Their number this year is not expected to be much below the 1961 all-time high of about 762,000, the statisticians concluded.

"Why, what's the matter dear?" he asked.

"Everything's gone wrong today," she wailed. The clothesline broke and the washing fell in the dirt; the boys got in a fight at school and came home with black eyes. Jane fell down and tore her dress and to top it all, here you come home so drunk you don't know what you're doing!"

Hal Boyle

Editor's note--Hal Boyle has returned from an assignment to Viet Nam. This is his sign-off column from the war zone.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP--There is a time to stay and a time to go, and my time to leave South Viet Nam has come.

At least for now. The way the war is going, however, none can say how many who have served here for a while may be summoned to come again.

For this is the war nobody really knows. Most of us see only fragments of it -- even those in high places on both sides--and can only guess what final pattern will emerge.

But it is clear that many more American tears and much more American blood will be shed before the situation is ended by a political agreement or a battlefield conclusion.

We are no longer a referee or an umpire in a foreign civil struggle. We are no longer merely advisers. We are no longer simply pocketbook supporters of the side we favor. We are military participants and will become so in fuller measure.

Now we must supply more than cash. Now we must provide both backbone and muscle if we propose to continue here. And it would help the situation if we were to realize this fully ourselves.

It is easier to be an authority on the war in Viet Nam if you have never been here, or if you have been here 50 hours, than if you have been here 50 days or, probably, 50 months. It is easier to have hard and clear views as to how it can be settled.

The longer you stay here the more difficult it is to be sure you understand what really is going on, or whether any solution offered is the right and satisfactory one.

Here are a few of the confusing things you run into in this most bewildering of wars:

The land is lovely, but it is studded with millions of hidden bamboo and steel pike traps that will rip an unwary foot through the bone.

The people seem, on the whole, friendly to the American outsider. But a cousin of the smiling little boy you pat on the head this morning may blow up your billet tonight.

There are no fixed lines as in previous wars. The enemy is before you, beside you, and behind you. There is no absolute test to tell friend from foe.

Our side holds the big cities; their side holds most of the countryside. But they have fifth columns in every city, and we are trying to infiltrate the land areas they run.

Our side has all the necessary big weapons to win an orthodox war -- from aircraft carriers to self-propelled guns. But they know better how and where and when to ambush us than we seem to know how, where and when to ambush them.

The more Viet Cong we kill, the more of them come into the fight.

Some hold the war can never be won on the battlefield by either side, and that the only answer to military stalemate is diplomatic bargaining.

Some hold that diplomatic compromise would only postpone the issue. They feel that after a pause of a few months or years the Viet Cong would take over political power they have been unable so far to achieve by ambush.

This, in summary, is the present state of the war nobody knows the outcome of.

But it is obvious that we can no longer win it with a checkbook alone. As scores of thousands more U. S. troops make the long journey to Viet Nam, what they do there will bring home to us all the deepening price we must pay if we are to achieve our purpose in this mixed-up land.

If the women get their way, they won't take half but all when they haul the scoundrel into court, having given up the best years of their life,etc.

H. L. Hunt Says

MAO'S STRATEGY IN VIET NAM

For a long time we were supposed to believe that all the trouble in Viet Nam was the work of local rebels, the Viet Cong. Now it is admitted, and stressed even in official statements, that what the Viet Cong seemed to be doing is really being done by North Viet Nam and its Red leader, Ho Chi Minh.

The final step in getting at the truth is to recognize in turn that the real source of the strategy of the Viet Nam war, as well as its essential support, is Peking and Chairman Mao of Red China.

To see this clearly, it is only necessary to look at what is happening in the Viet Nam war and compare it with Mao's own handbook of strategy, a series of lectures in 1938 later published under the title, "On the Protracted War."

Mao's strategy rejects the idea of the quick decisive battle which seems natural to us in the West. Instead it calls for a gradual wearing away of the anti-communist will to fight, through guerrilla war at the point of conflict and propaganda war on the enemy's home front. The aim of the propaganda war is to undermine popular support for firm resistance to communism.

In the ugly tactics of demonstrations, hysterical denunciation of American policy, and vicious harassment of the families of Americans killed in action in Viet Nam, we see Mao's strategy for his enemy's home front working in the very heart of our own country.

That this could "happen here" is nearly unbelievable although the Communists seldom ever miss a trick. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The news story that caused the sharpest flap over President Johnson's press relations pertained to some general ideas of the late Adlai Stevenson regarding U. N. Article 19, which requires member nations to pay their dues or else lose their vote in the U. N. Assembly.

Before the flap subsided, the President was accused by one newsman of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion" lasting "six solid hours" because some of the facts in his proposed San Francisco U. N. speech regarding Article 19 had leaked to the press and he therefore changed it.

The man who so accused him was my distinguished colleague, Joe Alsop. And the man responsible for the alleged leak was another distinguished colleague, James Reston of the New York Times.

It is not unusual for presidents to lose their tempers over news stories. I recall how President Hoover got so riled at the foreign dispatches of the Chicago Daily News in 1930 that he called in its publisher, Col. Frank Knox, and demanded that his foreign editor, Paul Scott Mowrer, and his London correspondent, Constantine Brown, be fired. Knox refused.

In the same administration, Hoover's Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley, paced the floor for half an hour scolding me because I reported that he practiced entrances to White House receptions before a mirror. He boasted that he was going to get my job with the Baltimore Sun. Next week I was fired.

If the present President of the United States did change his speech before the United Nations at San Francisco as alleged by Alsop because Reston leaked it in advance; and if he also engaged in "six solid hours" of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion," then the public ought to know the details, so I went to the highest sources to check them out.

--CAUTIOUS LBJ--

I found that sometime prior to the San Francisco speech commemorating the U. N.'s twentieth anniversary, some ideas for the speech were sent the White House by Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary for U. N. Affairs, and members of his staff. They suggested that Johnson announce at San Francisco a modification of Article 19 so that peace-keeping dues to the U. N. would be on a voluntary, not a compulsory, basis. Simultaneously the United States was to announce a voluntary contribution.

Presidential reaction was cautious. Johnson said he could not alter the American policy toward Article 19 without consulting the Congress and our NATO allies.

"We've got to consult with Dirksen (the Republican senator from Illinois) who has gone along with us on a lot of things," the President was quoted as telling his advisers. "And we ought to talk to Bourke Hickenlooper, (Republican senator from Iowa) who has been very helpful regarding the loan to the United Nations.

"You get Adlai Stevenson to come down and appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and tell them what he has in mind, and then we'll see if we can work out a proposal for the U. N. General Assembly in September," he was quoted as saying. "We can't take this up in San Francisco."

On June 20, John Pomfret, the New York Times correspondent covering the White House, asked whether the President planned to speak on Article 19 at San Francisco and was given a negative reply. Next day, Reston published a carefully worded report that President Johnson was "being strongly urged" to give up the fight to force U. N. members to pay for U. N. peace-keeping armies and to place the Viet Nam war before the U. N. Reston added that he was expected to do the first, not the second.

Four days later Johnson spoke at San Francisco and did neither.

--ERRONEOUS FACTS--

Ten days later, Alsop reported that Reston's story had been greeted by "one of those outbursts of Johnsonian anger that sometimes make Washington nowadays seem like Captain Bligh's Bounty."

Alsop also reported that in order that no one "should know the President's thought before its official disclosure,. . .the Secretary of State and one of his chief subordinates were kept at the White House until 2 a.m. one morning reworking the President's U. N. anniversary speech."

I was further informed on excellent authority that the President did not spend six hours ranting against the Reston column, but that he had been curious as to where Alsop got his facts and had asked the State Department about.

He was informed that Alsop had spent considerable time trying to see the Secretary of State and Head of Central Intelligence without success and seemed quite peeved about it.

I was also informed that the material for the President's speech came from the book of Barbara Ward, "The Rich Nations and the Poor Nations," which she had given to LBJ some months ago. The actual text of the speech, 80 per cent of it, was written several weeks prior to San Francisco.

These are rather pickayunish molehills for the country to be concerned about compared with the legislative mountains of Medicare and Negro voting rights. Nevertheless, they seem to be what concerns many of our opinion makers today.

--U. S.-JAPANESE CABINET TALKS--

Japanese cabinet members didn't thumb their noses at the United States during the joint cabinet talks last week, but in a very polite and dignified way they came close to doing so.

The Japanese were more independent, more adamant in opposing some American polices, and more aloof than our involvement in Viet Nam than at any time since the end of the war.

The meeting, even though not especially productive, was considered a healthy one, chiefly because it showed that ex-enemies, now allies, could engage in frank discussion.

Two factors influenced the Japanese - American cabinet talks:

1. The growth of Japanese Nationalism.

2. The disapproval of America's policy in North Viet Nam.

The American embassy in Tokyo had reported some time before this that, as of last February, American popularity in Japan suddenly took a serious downward turn. The drop was associated 100 per cent with our policy of bombing North Viet Nam.

Inasmuch as Japan was subject to bombardment itself during the war, it could understand the reaction of the North Vietnamese. There was also a certain feeling of sympathy with another Asiatic country, coupled with resentment against a country considered the most powerful nation in the world.

While there was never any discussion of racial kinship with the Vietnamese as against the white citizens of the United States, nevertheless there had been an undertone.

--JAPAN'S EXPERIENCE IN CHINA--

Japanese officials have not been publicly critical of the United States over Viet Nam, but the Japanese people have. Privately, the Japanese cabinet members have argued with top American officials, pointing out that they are embarked on a "no win" policy in Viet Nam.

"We had the same experience in China," the Japanese have advised. "The more we fought, the more we lost. You can't invade the Asiatic continent, especially a jungle area, and win. You're licked even before you start."

Anti-American sentiment has become so strong that Ambassador Edwin Reischauer, married to the daughter of a former Japanese prime minister, and one of the most popular envoys the United States has even sent to Japan, has had to curtail his public speeches.

During the Japanese - American cabinet talks, the Japanese made the following general points:

A. They would have nothing to do with our policy in Viet Nam and definitely would not participate in economic aid for that area.

B. The Japanese are delighted to participate in economic aid for the rest of Southeast Asia, especially Burma and the Philippines. They are not enthusiastic over getting involved with President Sukarno in Indonesia.

C. Japan was insistent that she get landing privileges in New York and the right to fly across the American continent. It was pointed out that Pan American Airways could not possibly fly around the world unless it landed in Tokyo, and that Japan would expect to have reciprocal rights in the United States.

When American officials pointed out that the Italians asked for the same rights across the USA but were nied, the Japanese replied: "But Rome is not Tokyo. You can fly across Europe without landing in Rome but you can't fly across the North Pacific without landing in Tokyo."

It was agreed that Japanese-American talks would be held to adjust this problem.

D. The Japanese flatly refused to curtail their trade with Red China. In fact, they are pushing it.

E. Japan will support the United States in its policy toward Nationalist China and is quite proud of its relations with Formosa, a former Japanese colony.

F. Japan will continue its friendly relations with Korea and endeavor to improve them. The United States officially is not having anything to do with this, though on the Q. T. It has been helping both the Japanese and the Koreans to forget their old bitterness.

Next to the hassle over air-landing privileges, the biggest hassle was over fish. This is a relatively minor industry totaling only about eight to ten million dollars a year. The fishing problem is still unsolved.

At one point, President Johnson remarked to Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee: "I better not invite you to the White House for lunch with the Japanese. You'll get into an argument over fish."

Magnuson was invited to lunch, but did not get into an argument. At one point, the Japanese minister of transport remarked to him: "Fishing very good this year. Next year not so good."

He referred to the fact the salmon catch was estimated at 25 million pounds this year but went up to 38 million instead.

--U. S.-JAPANESE TRADE--

The Japanese cabinet members complained vigorously about growing American trade restrictions. American cabinet members countered that 28 per cent of all Japanese exports came to the United States, which is far greater than the 2.6 per cent of Japanese exports to Red China.

At one point, Japanese demands became so vigorous that Secretary Rusk gave this reminder:

"You forget that Japanese prosperity is due in large part to the fact that you don't have to spend any money on your defenses. The United States supplies your defense."

The Japanese, who devoutly do not want another war, have been afraid that the Johnson administration would escalate war in Viet Nam. They know this would mean retaliation against the No. 1 American base in the Northern Pacific, Okinawa. If Okinawa were bombed, Japan would be dragged into World War III.

This was the shadow which hung over the conference table in Washington last week.

Carolyn Sue Westfall Is July Bride Of Don Cannon

MORLEY: In a beautiful and impressive ceremony Friday, July 2, at the Baptist Church, Miss Carolyn Sue Westfall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flavel C. Westfall of Morehouse, became the bride of Donald Wade Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cannon, Morley, Mo.

Rev. Liston Smith, pastor, officiated the double ring ceremony, in the presence of many friends and relatives.

The church altar was decorated with baskets of white gladiolus and a fifteen branch candelabra. The aisle of the church was also annointed with six single branch candelabra. The candle lighters were Misses Susy King and Elaine Jackson, friends of the bride and groom. They were identically dressed in light blue chiffon over taffeta and wore corsages of white carnations.

Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Robert Daugherty at the organ. Mrs. Rex Montgomery, soloist, sang "Always" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride approached the altar on the arm of her father who escorted her down the bridal aisle and gave her in marriage. For her wedding the bride chose a floor length gown of chantilly lace over taffeta and net. The gown featured a scalloped neckline with long sleeves that came to a point at the wrist. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was secured with a crown of seeded pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a white orchid atop a white Bible.

Miss Westfall chose Miss Lois McFerrow as her maid of honor, and the bridesmaid was Miss Mary Lou Lincoln. They were attired in dresses of light blue taffeta and each carried a bouquet of carnations tinted blue, and their veils were secured with blue carnations.

Attending Mr. Cannon as best man was David Cannon, brother of the groom. Groomsman was Winford Farrow, friend of the groom. Serving as ushers were Rex Montgomery and Gene Hudson.

Mrs. Linda King of Cape Girardeau presided at the guest book.

A reception was held in the church basement. The bride's table was annointed with a three tier wedding cake, topped by the traditional miniature bride and groom, a crystal punch bowl at each end of the table completed the arrangement.

Assisting at the brides' table were Mrs. Paula Cannon, Mrs. Susan Farrar, Mrs. Anita Freed and Mrs. Marie Abernathy.

The couple took a short wedding trip to Clearwater Lake and are now at home to their friends at Morley, Mo.

The former Miss Carolyn Sue Westfall, was honored with a bridal shower at the Morehouse - Delmo community building. The bride's chosen colors of blue and white were dominant throughout the theme. The gift table was covered with a blue table cloth and decorated with white wedding bells.

Refreshments of punch and cake were served.

Those attending or sending gifts were Mrs. Donnie Sterling, Mrs. Barbara Nimmo, Mrs. Westfall, Mrs. Dora Holder, Miss Anita Sullivan, Mrs. Rosalee Sullivan, Mrs. Stella Slikard, Mrs. Elmer Cummins, Mrs. Crider, Miss Betty Crider.

Mrs. Glenda Kelly, Mrs. Elsie James, Miss Suzy King, Mrs. Anna Finney, Mrs. Florence Dovers, Mrs. Norma James, Mrs. Beulah Rodgers, Mrs. R. T. Reed, Mrs. Sandra Scott, Mrs. Joe Roy King.

Mrs. Francis Harrison, Mrs. Laverne Carmack, Mrs. Ralph McFerron, Mrs. Muriel Bryant, Mrs. Judi Keating, Mrs. Irene Yount, Mrs. Maxine Conley, Mrs. Mabel Northcutt, Miss Lois McFerron, Miss Tami James.

Mrs. Loretta Curtner, Mrs. Irene Williams, Mrs. Ann Amerson, Mrs. Mae King, Mrs. Edward Dodge, Miss Sharron Dodge and Mrs. Jewell Watson.

Extension Club Has Meeting

The Vanduser Extension Club met Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. in the community building with seven members and one visitor present. The club was honored by the presence of Mrs. Frank Willard from Key West, Fla., daughter of Lillian Beavers.

After the club collect was read and the minutes given, a committee was selected for telephone service. The committee is composed of Evelyn Hill and Virginia Yandell.

An apron was won by Mrs. Casey. Martha Sue Foster gave the lesson.

Roll call was answered with "the work I like to do."

The 4-H Club lead by Muriel Patterson will attend the next club meeting August 4 to bake cookies for the Vanduser Club. A club picnic will be held August 10 at the City Park in Sikeston.

The club voted to assist the Scott County Extension Club in locating victims of cerebral disease. Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Casey and Mrs. Edwards.

Miss Hogan Is FHA Delegate

PHILADELPHIA July 13 -- Sheri Hogan, State Representative, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hogan of East Prairie and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Daugherty of Sikeston is one of 1,500 teenage delegates and advisers attending the national meeting here of Future Homemakers of America.

The theme of the four-day meeting is "Building Blocks for the Future." The opening keynote address on this theme given last night by Mrs. Orville Freeman, wife of the secretary of agriculture, suggested programs of action youth can undertake in helping to bring about a "bright, beautiful future."

Other sessions during the week will be addressed by Mary Steichen Calderone, M. D., executive director of the Sex Information and Education Council of the U. S., Inc.; Dr. Francena L. Nolan, dean of the School of Home Economics of the University of Connectivut; Dr. Carlfred B. Broderick, Pennsylvania State University professor of family relationships, and other experts in subjects pertinent to the FHA goal of helping individuals improve personal, family, and community living. Ella Dee Kessell, former FHA'er who won the Miss West Virginia. and second runner-up Miss America titles, will be honor guests at the banquet that concludes the meeting on Thursday.

Future Homemakers of America are high school home economics students. The organization, founded in 1945, has over half a million members throughout the United States. Home economics teachers and educators serve as advisers, but youth members have major responsibility for planning and conducting their national meetings.

Miss Hogan, a senior at East Prairie High School participated with the rest of the Missouri delegation and the state adviser, Miss Patsy Tennison, in the audience participation after Dr. Mary Calderone's talk on "Morals and Manners Matter."

SEWS FOR WIFE

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Jack Chambliss is a singer, music educator and a church choir director by profession — but in his spare time, he chooses to make a sewing machine sing.

Chambliss says sewing provides the same kind of pleasure for him as does his woodworking hobby. He makes his wife at least one new outfit each season and sews for his daughter as well.

When Jack and Wilmoth Chambliss were first married, his mother and sister sewed for the bride. Then they moved 1,000 miles away to St. Cloud, Minn., where he served on the faculty of St. Cloud State College. When Mrs. Chambliss needed new clothes, he decided to try his hand at it. His first creation was such a success that he has continued sewing.

NO. 5 CARRIES ON

CLAYTON, N.M. (AP) — Post Office Box No. 51 has been used by members of the same family for the past 77 years. In 1888, Miss Elisa Coigny went to the post office and rented that box after she moved here from Grenville where she'd served as postmistress. She kept the same postal box all during her married life as Mrs. Jack Porter.

When she and her husband died, their daughter, Mrs. Alice Porter Blake, continued renting the box. When a new postal building was built recently, Mrs. Blake made sure she got box No. 51.

Sam Mele Fined $500 And Suspended For Five Days

MINNEAPOLIS —ST. PAUL (AP) — Manager Sam Mele, waiting out a five-day suspension imposed after his altercation Sunday with umpire Bill Valentine, had his ruffled feelings soothed Monday night when his American League-leading Minnesota Twins whipped the Los Angeles Angels 5-2.

"They didn't seem to miss me, did they?" Mele said after viewing the game from Twins' President Calvin Griffith's booth in the Metropolitan Stadium pressbox.

"Maybe I should sit up here all the time."

Mele, who earlier Monday said he felt league President Joe Cronin's punishment of the suspension and a $500 fine was unfair, was in a considerably more jovial mood after the Twins won to protect their 3½-game America League lead.

Coach Hal Naragon directed the Twins from the dugout, and will serve as acting manager until Mele can return to the field at Baltimore Saturday night.

Fabick Continues To Win Leslie Edged In Close Bout

Strong hitting and fielding led the mighty Fabick in coasting to a 14-12 win over the next-to-last place Police in the American League last night. Police put up a fine battle allowing Fabick no more hits than they captured themselves.

Police began in the lead at the beginning of the bout with 4 runs off 4 hits. They held Fabick scoreless and hitless in that frame. Fabick came back in the second with a run to bring the score to 4-1. Again Police battered Fabick with another run still holding them without action in the third. Fourth frame started the rocks tumbling when Fabick gave the ball a ride with 3 hits and when on in tallying across 8 runs. That brought the score to 9-5 — Fabick in the lead for the first time. In the bottom of the fourth Police banged 2 hits and touched home plate 4 times. Things were all tied up. Fabick took the top position again in the fifth scoring 4 runs and holding Police to 2. Last inning brought a run for both teams.

Allen starting for Fabick was relieved by McRoy who was handed the win. Terrell pitched a fine game but took the loss in the last two frames.

Leslie Insurance received a bump in the second game at Farris Field as they were nicked by fourth place Security Federal with 8-7 as the final score. Leslie's pitcher Wake may have lost the game but he sure pitched a fine game allowing only 2 hits to Security. Leslie tagged the baseball for 5 hits off McConnell's fastball. McConnell was the winning pitcher as Wake gave in to be stuck with the loss.

Security took an early inning lead as they dumped one run across the plate in the first. In the third, Leslie banged 1 hit to produce their 3 runs. Security came storming back in the bottom of that frame with 5 runs. That carried the score to 6-3. Two runs were tallied by Leslie in the fourth and 2 in the last — but not enough to tower over Security. They scored twice in the last to bring the score to 8-7.

Harlow prompted Leslie Insurance's hitting attack as he let 2 go out of the infield for base hits. Beck and McConnell managed the only hits for Security.

Matson Leaves To Join U.S. Team

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) —Randy Matson, world's record holder in the shot put, leaves Thursday for New York to join the American team that competes against Russia at Kiev July 31-Aug. 1.

He is departing earlier than anticipated so he can go by way of Wichita, Kan., where an AAU meet for the American team is being held Friday night. He has hopes of being able to compete in the meet designed to raise funds to send the U.S. team to Russia.

Matson said Senator Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., who has called for an investigation of the NCAA-AAU feud, had sent him the copy of a telegram in which he asked the two organizations to allow Matson to compete at Wichita.

The NCAA had forbidden his participation and Matson had planned to leave July 24 for New York until he learned of the new developments.

"I am going to Wichita with hopes of being able to compete," said Matson. "But I'll attend the meet even if I have to sit in the stands."

Lewis Lashes Legion In National League Contest

Lewis Furniture chalked up another win last night at Puckett Field as they skated to a 6-1 decision over the Legion nine.

The big spotlight of the evening shone down on Lewis' star pitcher and hitter, Schatzley. The little hurler, handed the ball to 19 players--striking out 11, walking 3 and allowing only 1 Legion batter, Britt, to rap the ball for a single in the fourth. He was given full 6 inning credit with the win as he held Shy with the defeat. Not only highlighted was he in the pitching, but also in the slugging. Out of the 5 hits for his team he drove in 2 of them with a home run in the fourth.

Lewis scored twice in the third and fourth and once in the fifth. Legion scrapped up one hit and one run in the fourth.

Game number two for the evening in the National League was surrendered by A & B Oil Co. to Kiwanis with an 8-4 total.

The six-inning bout got under way with action in the second frame when Kiwanis started the scoring on Adams two-bag hit. The fourth inning really saw life as Kiwanis crossed the plate 6 times on 3 hits. A & B managed their first of 4 runs in that frame. Inning 5 brought one extra run to the powerful hitting Kiwanis nine. A & B started a rally on 4 hits and 3 runs but was grounded before any tying or winning runs tallied across.

Out of the 11-hit attack by Kiwanis, Hackney and Adams were responsible for 3 and Hosey for 2. Wilson and Mulcahy led the losers with 2 apiece.

Miller hurled for Kiwanis giving the disappointment to Dodd of A & B.

Phillies Muffed Cards Streak In 5-2 Triumph

Kansas City stopped the White Sox 6-3 at Chicago Monday night while the Philadelphia Phillies dropped St. Louis, 5-2, to end a Cardinal winning streak at four.

The Cardinals got one run in the sixth with the help of a collision between two Philadelphia outfielders. Bill White walked with two out in the inning and Mike Shannon bashed the ball to left-center. Alex Johnson appeared to have caught the ball at the wall when he collided with Johnny Briggs. The ball rolled away as White scored and Shannon went into third with a triple.

Ray Washburn took the loss for the Cards. It was his seventh defeat against five victories. The winner was Chris Short.

Kansas City shut out the White Sox over the first six innings behind two-hit pitching of Rollie Sheldon.

In the seventh, the A's scored all of their runs on a single, an error, another single, a bunt sacrifice, a squeeze bunt, a stolen base and Dick Green's three-run homer.

The White Sox scored twice in their half of the seventh on two singles, a walk, another single and another walk that forced in the second run. Chicago picked up one more in the ninth on a walk, a single, and a foul-fly out.

Sheldon received credit for the victory although he needed help from Jim Dickson, Don Mossi and Wes Stock.

Kansas City is idle today while the Cards again host the Phillies. Curt Simmons will start for St. Louis against Jim Bunning.

Eric Sappenfield Pulls Unassisted Triple Play

In a Musial League bout last Thursday between Rotary and Odd Fellows a rare happening occurred -- an unassisted triple play. The stunt man that hauled off the rarely seen performance was Rotary's on-the-ball third baseman, Eric Sappenfield. Anyone that is able to time the play so perfectly as did Eric, must have been "on the ball."

It all happened in the third inning when Odd Fellows were trying to break the 9-9 tie. In that spectacular and terrible inning Odd Fellow's Farris took a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Murphy also walked. Fausett came to bat to let loose a single to load the bases with no outs -- Farris on third, Murphy on second, and Fausett on first. Harbin walked to the plate and let one of La Plant's fastballs loose for a thought sure single over third base. Thought -- yes, but Eric wasn't about to let Odd Fellows score any more runs, and snagged the linedrive to put up the first out. Seeing the runners thinking the ball long gone and advancing, he stepped on third forcing Farris out and went on to triple everything up as he tagged Murphy on his way to third.

The inning was over, but not for Eric as he will long remember a tied ballgame -- with bases loaded, no outs, and then all of a sudden 1-2-3, it's all over.

Rotary won the game with a final score of 14-10.

Finest Seats In House Top Redbird Roost

Editor'S Note: Joe Bean and Richard Smith, members of the Daily Standard's editorial department, were press-box guests of the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday.

Perched more than 70 feet above home plate, and commanding a view second to none, the finest seat in Mr. Busch's redbird roost at Dodier and Grant in St. Louis is the press box.

The two-level, 80-seat haven for sportswriters sits on the roof at the southwest corner of Busch Stadium. Toward the right, the near-complete stainless steel arch gleams in the afternoon sun; the centerfield flags are draped at half mast; and in left field, the huge A and the eagle above the scoreboard obscure all but a glimpse of the city beyond the ball park.

Looking almost straight down, we gazed upon the symmetrical beauty of the playing field. With home plate at a center, the park stretches into right and left field with identical facilities on either side of the diamond.

Batting circle, dugout, coach's box, bullpen, and warning track: it looks like the field could be balanced on a needle point.

Open only to authorized members of the press, the lofty seats became ours after showing our tickets four times: once at the press gate window, again at the elevator, then again at the lobby on the fifth "floor" of the ball park, and finally as we walked into the press box itself.

Sitting on the upper tier, we glanced down to the section one step below us. Teletypes and sportswriters chattered away, as the game's play-by-play was relayed to newspapers across the land.

A press lounge behind us served cold drinks and sandwiches, courtesy of the Cardinals.

As novices to the press box, we were unknowns who watched the "old pros" enter and leave, greeting Ed and Emma, the genial pair who run the lounge.

Once fixed in our seats--numbers 25 and 26--we easily had the finest possible view of the game. Peering almost straight down, we watched the pitchers exercise their talents with the curve ball, the slider, and the screwball -- their intricate gyrations were easily visible.

Electric fans kept the air moving, and the official scorer kept the sportswriters posted on basehits and errors, wild pitches and passed balls.

On our way downstairs after the game, we shared an elevator with former Phillies' great Richie Ashburn, now a baseball announcer.

The press box, in retrospect, lacked only one thing: an abundance of foul balls. One foul found its way into the box, but try as we might, it was too far away.

blocks harmful contaminants

(so they can't block your gas line!)

What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER blocks out contaminants right at the pump nozzle. If you use your car on the job (and even if you don't) you stay out of trouble when you "fill 'er up filtered" with American® Regular or American® Super-Premium.

Charleston Guards Leave for Ripley

CHARLESTON -- Four officers and 53 enlisted men of Charleston's Company C, 1st Battalion, 140th Infantry left at 4 a.m. Friday for their annaul two - week summer encampment at Camp Ripley, Minn.

The company assembled at the armory at 1:30 a.m., and left in motor convoy, passing the Home Oil Co. at 4 a.m.

An advance party composed of Staff Sergeants Buford Sutherland and Joseph T. Glenn left earlier this week to prepare the company area at Camp Ripley.

The company will return to Charleston on Aug. 1.

Rusk Wants to Be Anonymous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Can you remember anything Secretary of State Dean Rusk ever said except for that "eyeball to eyeball" bit about the Cuban missile crisis?

Probably not. And that in itself is one of the best commentaries on how he runs his job. He is one of the most anonymous secretaries of state this country ever had. He wants it that way.

Nevertheless, for a man who says so little memorable or controversial, it's odd how rumors keep popping up that President Johnson, who inherited him from President John F. Kennedy, is going to replace him.

There was one after Johnson won the presidency on his own in the 1964 election. There were rumors after that. There was one last week. There was another, coming out of Congress, Monday.

This one has Johnson appointing Rusk U.S. ambassador to the United Nations to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson. but if Johnson has any such thought he put himself in an awkward position to do anything about it.

Last week, the day before Stevenson died, Johnson was asked about the rumor going around then that he planned to get rid of Rusk. The President told the questioner:

"I think you do a great damage and a great disservice to one of the most able and most competent and most dedicated men I have ever known, Secretary Rusk. He sits to my right in the Cabinet room. He ranks first in Cabinet and he ranks first with me."

On the face of it that would seem the best piece of job insurance Rusk could get. Monday's rumor had Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara succeeding Rusk if Rusk took Stevenson's place.

But Johnson seems immensely pleased with both men in the jobs they have. Only three weeks after taking office in 1963 Johnson said of McNamara:

This country never had an "abler or more dedicated secretary of defense and I have known them all." At another time Johnson said McNamara "represents the very best in America."

Since Rusk and McNamara get along, there's no apparent rivalry or bickering between them but there is a difference.

McNamara, highly aggressive, has antagonized some members of Congress, especially in wanting to save money by shutting down government installations in some congressional districts.

His self-assurance irks some people, too. He says that when Kennedy gave him the defense job he chose an "active role providing aggressive leadership" and it "represents my own philosophy of management."

He is an acknowledged whiz on facts, figures and managing the whole defense set-up. It's a lot more difficult to make an appraisal of Rusk. Highly intelligent, amazingly self-effacing, he almost always says the usual.

His best-remembered statement came in talking about the head-on American-Russian showdown over Cuban missiles in 1962. Rusk said the two countries were "eyeball to eyeball and I think the other fellow blinked."

Rusk, unlike McNamara, avoids public clashes almost totally. Therefore, since he is obvious and usual in public, his great value to Johnson must come in his contributions behind closed doors.

One thing is sure: he's calm and he is a master in his field of foreign affairs, which means he's an expert technician. This would seem to make him to order for Johnson and Kennedy.

Both insisted on doing the talking on big problems. Thus Rusk is a switch from his two most famous precedessors of the past 15 years: Secretaries of State Dean Acheson and John Foster Dulles.

Both were always in hot water from talking.

Commission Opposes LBJ Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Highway Commission has told the state's congressional delegation it opposes four pending Johnson administration bills as too costly and too detrimental to the highway program.

In letters to Missouri congressmen and senators, made public today, the commission said the proposals if enacted would cost an estimated $50 to $60 million in the next five years.

"We are sure our citizens want more and better roads," the letter said. "It is most evident to us any reduction in funds, especially a mandatory one, will be detrimental to Missouri's highway program.

"No one quarrels with the administration's views on billboard control or landscaping and roadside development. However, we cannot comply with the advertising control features and the relocation of junkyards through police powers. The rights of the billboards and junkyards will have to be purchased."

Bills to ban billboards along interstate routes and to force the removal of junkyards from near highway rights of way were introduced in the 1965 legislature. Both measures failed.

The letter said the commission is not opposed to landscaping and beautification of highway rights of way but the cost would take too much from the road building program.

It also opposed a fourth proposal "making it mandatory that one-third of the secondary funds be used for construction of scenic roads and roads leading to recreational areas.

"In Missouri we have about 23,000 miles in our secondary system. we have a long range improvement program for this system. If the funds are reduced by one-third, as proposed, our program must be reduced accordingly."

Move toward Plant Bonds

DEXTER -- Further legal steps toward the voting soon of industrial bonds for the expansion of the Elder factory were taken this week by city officials and officers of the Chamber of Commerce.

It now appears probable that the vote on the bonds will come sometime in August. The bonds will be for $85,000 -- to be retired by rental by the Elder firm. There will be no increase in taxes as a result of the bonds, it was emphasized.

This week, legal papers were received by the Chamber of Commerce, after a trip to St. Louis by W. L. Arnold, Chamber of Commerce secretary. These were approved and signed this week by Mayor Melvin Gainer and members of the City Council, and are now being processed again -- another of the lengthy legal steps necessary in such a bond program.

Meanwhile, plans are being made to start work on the project as quickly as possible. The plan calls for the construction of a large addition to the Elder plant here, which will expand the company's operations here and permit the hiring of additional employees.

C of C leaders said that Elder officials were anxious to have the project completed as quickly as possible.

Aviation Day Aug. 15 at Kennett Port

KENNETT -- The Kennett Aero club has announced plans for its second annual Aviation Day Fly-in, which will be held Aug. 15 at the Kennett Municipal Airport.

The club met to set up committees and begin the ground work for the upcoming event.

Plans are now being made to accommodate more than 1,000 persons. Some 700 persons were given rides in planes, piloted by members of the club, last year.

Refreshments will be available and various forms of aerial entertainment are being planned. A number of prizes will be given, including the youngest and oldest passengers and oldest antique plane.

Pilots are expected to fly-in to the event from throughout the Mid-South.

Operations of Plant Related

DEXTER -- The large and extensive operations of the IXL Handle Manufacturing Company in this area, including Bernie and Dexter, were described to members of the Chamber of Commerce by Charles W. Gary, sales representative for the firm which is headed by E. L. Keathley of Dexter.

The IXL firm is one of the largest employers in this area, and turns out tool handles and other wood products, including furniture legs, which are sold throughout the world.

Gary traced briefly the history of the firm, which is one of the oldest such manufacturing companies in the country in continuous operation. In addition, during the past few years Mr. Keathley has purchased other such manufacturing concerns in Southeast Missouri, thus enlarging his operations in the area.

The firm has a large warehouse facility in Dexter and there are plans being made to enlarge the facilities here in the future, Gary said.

IXL produces all types of tool handles, for both agricultural tools and striking tools. In addition thousands of legs for furniture are produced for furniture manufacturers all over the world.

Main problem today for the firm, Gary explained, was the securing of sufficient quantities of the proper quality of wood.

Watch For Rally

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK -- One of Wall Street's cherished traditions is the summer rally. And this year even those who scoff at such things are watching the market closely for a sign of a sustained rally.

Some brokers are hoping that the market's recent steadying has made a foundation on which a measureable rally can be built.

In their view the sharp break at the end of June was the climax of the long slide from the stock price highs reached May 14. These brokers term the rebound from that climax a technical reaction to overselling and not a dyed-in-the-wool summer rally.

And they see the lazy trading and minor price variations of last week as a sign that the market at last may be immune to much of the nervousness which triggered the declines of last month and late May.

Like many of Wall Street's traditions there is nothing sure about a summer rally.

Sometimes it is absent or so minor and short an event as scarcely to merit that description. Sometimes it comes early in the summer. Usually it is tied to some news event that has little seasonal coloring. And sometimes the rally has been so late that the traditionalists have been hard put to defend it as a summer rather than an early fall rally.

Often any little rebound, however technical and short lived, is termed a summer rally just to get that tradition neatly sewed up and out of the way.

This year one is awaited with more than usual anticipation. That is because of all the uncertainties that caused the May-June breaks and that still persist.

Viet Nam is the biggest question mark. But some brokers say that most traders have discounted the buildup in the war there. Many who sold nervously in May and June foresaw the trend to greater involvement of U. S. men and money in that war.

Business uncertainties also have plagued the market. Many stock traders have taken to the sidelines after lightening their portfolios and are waiting to see how the 53-month-old business upswing survives a summer slowdown and fares next fall.

A rally would please business because it would tend to bolster public confidence -- and good business is built on that. The Johnson administration would be pleased as a sign that nervousness over the effectiveness of its fiscal policies had been overcome.

Cape Hopes for Training Center

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO. -- December has been set tentatively as the date for awarding a general contract for construction of a Naval Reserve training center in Cape Girardeau.

The building, to cost between $300,000 and $500,000 will be erected on a five-acre tract optioned by the city for $50,000.

H. L. Jordan, project manager of the Midwest Division, Bureau of Yards and Docks, Great Lakes, Ill., said present plans call for bid advertisement about Nov. 15, with the contract award a month later.

The city expects to exercise the option on the land and will lease the tract to the Navy at $1 per year.

The Navy now operates a reserve training center at Municipal Airport, leased from the city. Two units, a surface division and a Seabee company train there. Combined strength runs between 225 and 250 men.

Canalou Club To Attend Fair

CANALOU -- The Thursday 4-H meeting was spent in making plans for the County 4-H Fair Thursday and Friday at New Madrid.

The club planned a number of exhibits and demonstrations. They will also participate in the "Share The Fun" numbers and enter the "Good Grooming" contest.

Demonstrations were given at this meeting by Harold Molloy on "How To Polish Shoes," Teressa Molloy on the "Proper Way to Brush Your Hair," and Ruth Lumsden demonstrated exercizes.

Mrs. Charles McCann and Mrs. Willard Cude, guests at this meeting served as judges and selected Nancy Cain and Sidney Fraley to represent the club at the fair. Ruth Ann Lumsden and Mike Geske were chosen as alternates.

Four Injured in Portageville Crash

PORTAGEVILLE -- Four young women were injured in the collision of two cars at a street intersection in Portageville Thursday afternoon.

According to the Highway Patrol investigation report, Karolyn Thompson, 19, of New Madrid, was driving east at 3:30 p.m. in a 1963 Pontiac. As she approached the street intersection she claims her vision was obstructed. She did not see any traffic and pulled out into the path of a southbound 1962 Ford driven by Joy Stewart, 25, of Point Pleasant.

In the collision of the two vehicles both drivers and two passengers in the Thompson car were injured. Karolyn Thompson received scrapes on the left side of her body and a nose injury. Carla Bell, 18, and Gwen Allen, 16, both of Lilbourn, suffered head and face injuries. Joy Stewart had a major cut on her face and lip and an injury to her left leg. All were taken to the Grable Clinic at Portageville for treatment.

Reject Bid for Signal Change

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Highway Commission said today it has approved $2,823,620 in bids for highway improvements.

It rejected as too high a bid for traffic signal modification on U. S. 67 in Poplar Bluff. The commission said they would be re-advertised for bids.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 years ago
July 20, 1915

While guests of Dr. Grinstead at Cairo, Monday night, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Yount were visited by the stork who left them a very fine son. The youngster was named John Henry, jr., and since the occasion the senior Yount wears a broad smile and speaks very proudly of what he and his son, John, propose to do on that big alfalfa farm.

Mrs. Chas. Yanson and daughter, Nell, left Saturday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. A. W. Edminston in Kennett.

Supt. R. V. Ellise of the local public school system this morning announced the selection of M. L. Grannemann of New Haven, Mo., as instructor of English at the Sikeston High School for the coming year.

At a wedding ceremony marked by simplicity, Miss Eva Hess, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Hess of this city, and Thomas C. Reed of Sparks, Nev., were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the Hess home on Park avenue.

Miss Honora Bailey entertained at luncheon last Thursday noon in honor of her guest, Mrs. Gladys Stewart of Springfield.

The following enjoyed a splash party at Dexter Monday evening: Misses Lillian and Lucille Kendall, Clara Lindley, Ruth Allard, Honora Bailey, Dorothy Miller, Helen Kready, Mrs. Gladys Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bailey, Messrs. Charlie and Harold Hebbeler, Byron Crain and Cecil Jones.

W. A. Martin, a former resident of Sikeston and Charleston, died Wednesday morning at his home in St. Louis.

Rain, accompanied by a severe windstorm Sunday evening, totaled 1.20 inches, filling streets with water.

Billy Johnson, seven-year-old son of Illah Johnson of Morley, died Thursday in St. Francis Hospital at Cape Girardeau, of injuries which he suffered when he was struck Wednesday by an automobile on Highway 61 a mile south of Morley.

Orville Lumsden of Sikeston stood first in a list of ranking Southeast Missouri golf league tournament players made public last week. Lumsden's average was 71 4/5 for the five games he participated in.

The Sikeston Legion Junior baseball team, already champions of the district, continued their winning streak in their last game of the season Sunday, defeating the Jackson nine in a game on the Jackson diamond. But it took the Sikeston boys 10 innings to do it. The final score was 3 to 2.

Two new teachers have been selected to fill the vacancies in the faculty of the Sikeston public schools, it is announced by the superintendent, Tharon Stallings, this week. E. Dean Owen, son of the Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Owen of Sikeston, will teach industrial arts and junior high school science at Sikeston High School. The other new teacher is Miss Alma Mercer of Oran, who will teach in the South Grade School.

The Sikeston Legion Junior baseball team, district champions, will go to St. Louis next Tuesday to take part in state contests.

Harold N. Taylor, Radioman First Class in the United States Navy, was killed in action on July 14, his relatives have been notified by the War Department.

PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

TUESDAY, JULY 20, 1965
Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it. (Revelation 3:8)

PRAYER: Help us, O Father, to be deeply sensitive to the needs of others about us. Help us to see the opportunities these very needs bring us for helpful service. We ask in the name of Christ, who said, "I am the door of the sheep." Amen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that whenever a couple is divorced, if the husband gets the children it is assumed that:

(1) He caught her under the worst possible circumstances or

(2) She is a tramp who didn't want to be bothered with the children or

(3) She is mentally unstable and/or an alcholic.

I would like to dispel these notions once and for all, and I am well qualified to do so since I'm a divorcee who is not a tramp, was not caught, nor am I incompetent or alcoholic. I gave up my children simply because I felt they would be better off with their father.

My husband and I never got along. I married him to please a socially ambitious mother. The children adore their father. They tolerate me. They think I am weak, insecure and addle-brained. They think their father is strong, brilliant and capable. I have never been able to control them. Whatever their father says is gospel.

When we split up several months ago my husband said, "Shall we ask the children with whom they want to live?" (They are 15, 13 and 12.) I replied, "No, I couldn't bear the humiliation of having them choose. Let's tell them they will live with their father." That settled it and I'm sure they were relieved.

So, here's a different kind of letter for your column, Ann Landers. Label it "Education." Sincerely yours. -- ODD WOMAN OUT

Dear Woman: You do not sound weak, insecure or addle-brained to me, but you have sadly underestimated yourself. Good luck in making a new life -- and thanks for the "education."

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing because my 14-year-old niece asked me to. I don't know the answer but I'm hoping you will.

My niece is a very sweet person and has many friends, both girls and boys. They are allowed to come to the house to sing, dance, play records and just visit, which I think is perfectly fine. The problem is the girl's mother.

She's in her middle 30's and has five children. The woman wears a bikini from the first day of spring until snow hits the ground. She knows she has an outstanding figure and apparently she wants everyone else to know it, too. The little high school boys who come to the house look and look until I think their eyes are going to pop out of their heads.

The bikinis this mother wears have the narrowest brassieres I've ever seen. The panties are little more than what the strippers in a burlesque house wear.

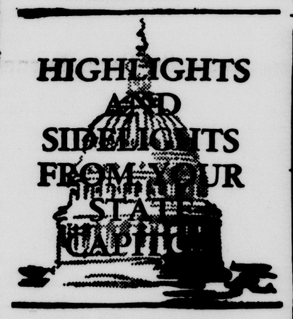
I think it is positively indecent and so does her 14-year-old daughter. Do you feel that this woman is right in her insistence that she can wear anything she pleases in her own home? -- G. R. M.

Dear G. R. M.: I believe a woman who is alone in her home has the right to wear anything she pleases or nothing at all, if she pleases -- provided the shades are down and the doors are bolted. When others are present, however, it is indecent to go around half naked (or in her case seven-eighths naked is more accurate).

I hope this mother will put on a house dress when her children and their friends are home -- before the daughter starts to meet her pals around the corner.

Parents are people -- they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.



ALBANY BID ACCEPTED FOR DIAGNOSTIC CENTER

Missouri communities have been placed in the uncomfortable position of having to bid against each other for pretty high stakes . .. the location of one of 11 new diagnostic centers for the mentally retarded.

So far the Division of Mental Diseases, headed by the able Dr. George Ulett and responsible for site selection, has received letters from 34 Missouri communities expressing an interest in a center.

The tiny Gentry County community of Albany has received the first nod from the division and officials indicate they are hopeful contracts for construction of the new $400,000 facility there can be started by October with completion by next July.

Ulett has set up a pretty tough criteria for communities to meet in order to even be considered. First, the community itself must approach the division expressing an interest. Then, civic leaders must fill out a lengthy questionnaire concerning what the community has to offer, acceptability by the local residents, etc.

In announcing the selection of Albany, Dr. Ulett noted: "One of the paramount considerations for this type of clinic is a humanitarian understanding and acceptance of the problems and needs of the mentally handicapped. In this respect, Albany presented a progressive point of view."

Albany also presented the state with a tract of land (for free) and indicated that $25,000 in local donations would be made available as a further inducement of its selection.

The latter, officials indicate, didn't really play an important role in Albany being chosen, it was merely icing on the cake.

When queried as to whether other towns seeking to be named as sites for the other 10 clinics would have to follow suit, a division spokesman replied in the negative.

Further prompting through local action in Albany came from a lumber dealer who offered to furnish all building materials at cost.

The benefits of being selected as a clinic site are many, with the possibility of providing many local jobs, with the effect of increasing local payrolls, local shopping and in general pulling up a small community by its bootstraps.

STATE GOVERNMENT GROWTH REFLECTED BY BLUE BOOK

The first official manual of the state of Missouri (commonly known as the Blue Book) appeared in 1878 and contained 72 pages, which is about twice the number of pages found in the present edition's table of contents.

Back then, however, the Blue Book was neither blue nor official. It was compiled by Secretary of State Michael K. McGrath but was published and sold as a private venture. The first editions even contained some advertising.

Since that time, the number of state employes has grown by leaps and bounds and the Blue Book has kept pace. The 1963-64 edition, containing well over 1,500 pages, had a printing of 40,000 at a cost in excess of $4 each. Secretary of State James C. (Jimmy) Kirkpatrick reports the latest count shows only 20 books left.

During the last legislature, Kirkpatrick proposed publication of a condensed version (200 pages) which would cost less than 90 cents and would be made available to high school students studying Missouri government. The measure passed the House and ended up in the logjam of the Senate in the wanning days of the session.

"We think this (the condensed version) would fulfill a definite need and result in wider knowledge of state government among high school students," Kirkpatrick commented.

At least two other states issue volumes such as that proposed by the Secretary of State and these are well liked, apparently.

Currently, each high school in Missouri receives one copy of the Blue Book as do the countless thousands of state, county, and city government officials. Under Kirkpatrick's proposal the condensed version would contain only the most important items, omitting the long rolls of state employes and other trivia. However, there would be published the regular Blue Book for official use.

Incidentally, Kirkpatrick has diligently searched the state for old copies of the Blue Book and has gathered together what is believed to be the only complete set in existence.

HEARNES SIGNS BILL SETTING HOUSE SIZE

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has made official the number of members in Missouri's next House of Representatives (168) but the action will be meaningless unless voters endorse the reapportionment proposals in the constitutional amendment election August 17.

If the proposal is rejected, Hearnes has indicated that he will have little choice but to call the Assembly back into special session to dig into the problem anew. Hanging over all of this, of course, is the approval which also must come from federal courts of Missouri's effort at complying with the supreme court's one-man-one-vote ruling.

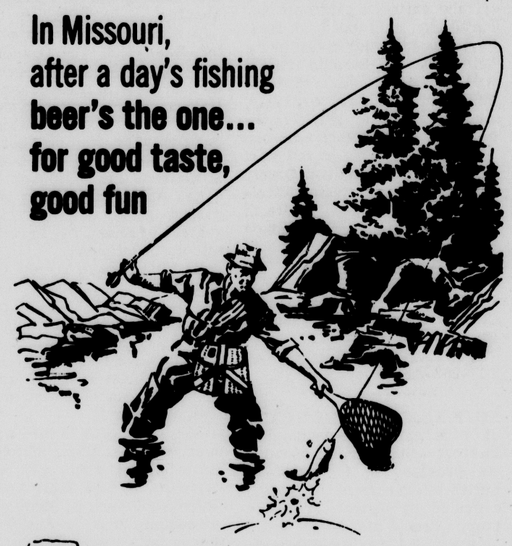
In Missouri, after a day's fishing beer's the one... for good taste, good fun



Wherever you fish for sport—on the ocean, by the booming surf, or on some quiet country pond, it's great at the end of the day to head for a rewarding glass of beer. While you're talking over the ones that got away, or pan-frying the ones that didn't, you enjoy the hearty taste and cool refreshment only a glass of beer can give you so well. Yes, whatever your sport—bowling or strolling, golfing or gardening—a frosty glass of beer makes a naturally great accompaniment.

Hearnes to Attend Rites At Bloomfield

BLOOMFIELD -- Amvet Post No. 28 is making elaborate plans for the dedication ceremonies of its new building, Aug. 6, which has Gov. Warren E. Hearnes as guest of honor and principal speaker. The Amvets expect a crowd and have ordered 1,500 pounds of fish for the fish fry. The event will be held in the Bloomfield City Park.

According to Dean Cooper, co-chairman of the affair with Edsel Edwards, the Amvets are enlisting just about every businessman in town to keep the eight kettles of fish going, frying hush puppies and serving the dinners and keeping the refreshments cold.

To make certain all workers (volunteers and draftees) know what details they are on, the names and details are listed below:

Advertising detail -- Don Ross and Norman Coburn.

Fuel detail -- Lee Proffer.

Ice and soda detail - Women's Auxiliary and Norman Underwood.

Refreshment detail -- Warren Reed (Chairman), Edsel Edwards, John Rushing and Bill Hughes.

Senate Passes GI Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed an administration-opposed "cold war" GI Bill of Rights measure. The issue of educational allowances and home loan benefits for post-Korean veterans now is up to the House.

The Senate rejected Monday Republican proposals to restrict the aid to veterans of combat zone service and then passed the bill, 69 to 17. The House failed to act on a similar Senate measure in 1959, but Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., told reporters Chairman Olin E. Teague, D-Tex., of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, has announced plans to hold early hearings on the new bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield indicated he expects favorable House action this year, when thousands are serving in Viet Nam.

Mansfield supported the bill, although the Budget Bureau, Defense Department and Veterans Administration opposed it.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., voted for the measure on final passage, expressing hope that the House will convert it "into the Viet Nam GI Bill we so badly need."

He had participated in efforts to restrict the benefits to men who served in areas of hostilities. An amendment along these lines, offered by Sen. Leverett Saltonstll of Massachusetts and other Republicans, lost, 52 to 36.

The bill covers all veterans serving from Jan. 31, 1965 - the declared termination date for establishing eligibility under the previous Korean GI Bill -- to July 1, 1967, the termination date of the compulsory draft law recently extended by Congress.

Eligibility for education allowances, $110 a month for bachelors, $135 for veterans with one dependent and $160 a month for veterans with more than one dependent, would be conditioned on more than 180 days of active duty or discharge for service - connected disability.

The same eligibility would apply for applicants for loans and guarantees for the purchase of homes and livestock. If a serviceman dies from service-connected disabilities, his widow could apply for such loans and guarantees.

The education allowance would provide 1 1/2 days of school aid for each day of active service, but with an over-all limit of 36 months.

The loan features would not provide aid in starting businesses - except for the help in acquiring farms and livestock - as did the earlier GI bills.

The government would guarantee 60 per cent of loans from banks and others up to $7,500 on residential real estate, and would provide a 50 per cent guarantee up to $4,000 on non-residential real estate.

Assigned to Battalion

I. CORPS, KOREA -- Army PFC Eddie E. Faire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Faire, 123 West Main St., East Prairie, Mo., has been assigned to the 11th engineer battalion in Korea.

Faire is a cook in the battalion. He entered the army in January of 1964 and completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

The 18-year-old soldier attended East Prairie high school.

Dirksen Faces Battle on His Remap Plan

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Everett M. Dirksen today carries his fight for a constitutional amendment on legislative reapportionment to the apparently equally divided Senate Judiciary Committee.

Barring last-minute shifts in position, the prospects pointed to an 8-8 tie vote. This would deny Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, the majority support he needs to bring the issue before the Senate itself.

Conceding the possibility of such an outcome, Dirksen reiterated to reporters his determination to get Senate action on the proposed amendment on which President Johnson has made no public statement but which Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey is actively fighting.

"I am a determined man," Dirksen told reporters. He would not indicate how he would overcome a committee setback. But he is at liberty any time to move to substitute the proposal for any measure now on the Senate calendar.

Dirksen wouldn't speculate whether a threatened filibuster by liberal opponents of the reapportionment proposal would delay the Labor Day adjournment of Congress he and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield are seeking.

Dirksen and Mansfield expect to take up that matter at a meeting Thursday or Friday with Johnson. The Republican leader observed that up to this point Johnson has given no indication he would be willing to let some of his legislative proposals go over until next year's session.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., apparently destroyed Dirksen's chances for a favorable committee vote on the Illinois senator's proposed reapportionment amendment when he offered a revised version of it.

Javits announced that if his substitute is rejected, he will vote against Dirksen's version in committee.

Both the Dirksen and Javits proposals would permit the voters of each state to decide whether they want one house of their legislature apportioned on other than the population basis ordered by the Supreme Courts in its one-man, one-vote decision.

But Javits' version would keep the court in control of all reapportionment actions by requiring that any plan must take population into account as one of its factors and must bear "a reasonable relationship to the needs of the state."

Address MFA

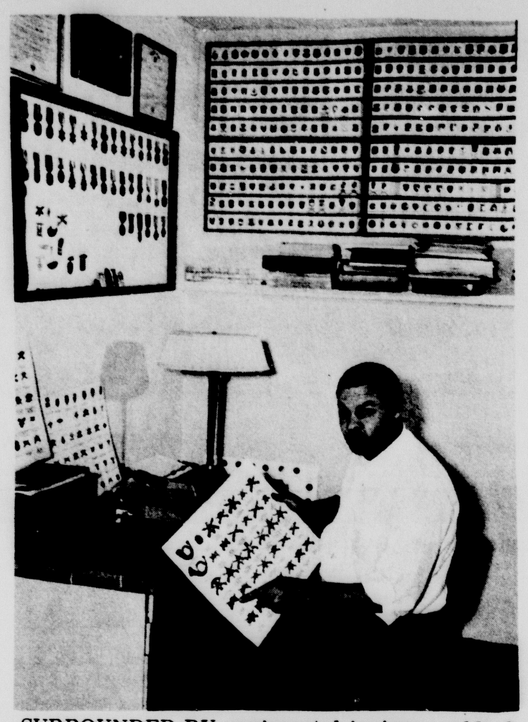
COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman will be principal speaker when the Missouri Farmers Association holds its annual convention Aug. 2 on the campus of Stephens College.

About 6,000 persons are expected to attend sessions of the MFA Womens Progressive Farmers Association during the one-day convention.



SURROUNDED BY regimental insigne and U. S. Armed Forces medals, Todd Wheatley displays a card of devices that have been worn as identifying badges by branches of the armed forces.

Former Sikeston Man Collects Military Insigne

A former Sikestonian and his hobby were featured in an employe publication of the Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., in Sunnyvale, Calif.

Todd Wheatley, who lived in Sikeston from 1926 to 1930 with his parents, Col. and Mrs. E. T. Wheatley, at that time a National Guard instructor, is a collector of military insigne. The Wheatleys' now live in Albuquerque, N. M.

His son's collection, occupying walls in several rooms of his home, includes more than 5,000 insigne medals, and citations.

He is attempting to collect a complete assortment of every item issued by the United States.

"Whenever possible," he said, "I want to know something of the individual to whom the device was awarded. Of equal importance, I want to know something of the histroy of the action, campaign, or war for which the award was made."

The earliest artifact in the collection, a cavalry insignia, dates to 1840.

He has arranged for the collection to go to the West Point museum.

Povoverty War Raises Ruckus

NEW YORK (AP) — The war on poverty is unleashing some combat in the ranks.

Although the over-all drive is rolling ahead, with its operations fast expanding, clashes have erupted behind the main battle front in several communities.

Official and unofficial sectors often have locked in struggles for control. Partisan politics have added to the jousting.

A cross-country Associated Press check indicated, however, that the vast, diversified program generally has moved off to an industrious start in many cities, yielding a growing network of projects for the poor.

"This is a brand-new program and some mistakes are inevitable," says congressman John Brademas, D-Ind., a member of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

In Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Omaha and Albany and Syracuse, N.Y., sharp controversies have embroiled the program.

To varying degrees, tension also has arisen in Detroit, Baltimore, New Jersey, Alabama, the San Francisco Bay area and elsewhere.

"This was a crash program and it certainly has crashed," said Youth Corps Director Howard Henson in Yavapai County, Ariz., after the County Board of Supervisors voted to terminate the program this fall.

Too complicated, they said, and time-consuming.

Mostly, however, the multi-phased undertakings, offering federal poverty-fighting funds in municipalities across the nation, took on widening scope and form, despite the outbreaks of internal strife.

Often, these involved power struggles between the dominant political establishments and local community groups.

A complex dispute in Los Angeles over who would administer government funds blocked a planned summer project for underprivileged teen-agers.

The issue also flared around "community action" organizations, set up in poor neighborhoods under the program, to mobilize residents to press for better conditions.

Sometimes, this involved federally financed community groups making protests to City Hall, raising the ire of local officialdom.

Under the program, private as well as public agencies, or both in combination, are eligible to set up aided projects if they meet the requirements. The law requires "maximum feasible participation" of the poor themselves.

Among the various operations: "Job Corps," setting up camps and centers for work and job training; "Neighborhood Youth Corps," providing part-time jobs to keep kids in school; "Head Start," bringing pre-school children up to standard to start school; "Vista," recruiting low-paid volunteers to serve in impoverished sections.

The federal government puts up 90 per cent of costs.

Besides the tug-of-wars over control, there also have been outcries that salaries paid were too high, and snarls over preliminary preparations and proposals which have delayed federal approval.

"We force every community to unite for action against poverty. Otherwise, they don't qualify for federal help," says Holmes Brown, public affairs director for the Office of Economic Opportunity. "Conflict is inevitable."

The "community action" units — intended to open channels for the poor to join in attacking their own problems — have caused the most ferment.

Assailing such an operation in Syracuse, N.Y., City Housing Director William L. McGarry called it "class struggle in the traditional Karl Marx style." And Republican Mayor William F. Walsh charged:

"It tries to pit the poor against everyone else in the community."

However, officials of Syracuse University, which sponsors that program with a $314,000 grant said the charges were false. Program Director Warren C. Haggstrom termed them "a smokescreen" to hide tenant grievances.

Ben Zimmerman, director of Syracuse's Crusade for Opportunity, the city's agency coordinating the bulk of its antipoverty work through a $3.5-million grant, says:

"The worst thing that could happen is for a fight to develop over who 'owns' the poor."

James E. Masters Services At Cape

World War I Veteran Dies

SCOTT CITY -- Mrs. R. A. Arnold has received word of the death of her uncle Frazier ("Doc") Davenport, Sunday night in Veterans Hospital in Danville, Ill.

Davenport, 74 years old, was a veteran of World War I. He had been a victim of shell shock and amnesia.

Originally from Ilmo, Mr. Davenport was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Laban Davenport. He married the former Miss Louise Graeser of Ilmo.

Surviving are his wife: a son, Frank Irvin Davenport, Kansas City, and three grandchildren. Also surviving are three nephews, Carl and Ernest Wright, Cape Girardeau, and Harold Bell Wright, Scott City.

Burial is scheduled for Thursday in Veterans Cemetery, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

McKinney to Bank Helm

KENNETT -- Gene McKinney, vice-president of the Kennett National Bank since February has been named executive vice-president. He succeeds A. Hughes Jones, who resigned in June.

McKinney was also elected to the bank's board of directors.

Also promoted were Donald C. Jones, from cashier to vice-president, and Reggie Cunningham, from assistant cashier to cashier.

McKinney began his banking career in 1937 at Jonesboro, Ark., and came to the Kennett National Bank as cashier when it opened Sept. 7, 1963.

He is now attending the School of Banking of the South at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, La., two weeks each year and plans to graduate this year.

Nearly 200 Work on Youth Corps Projects

NEW MADRID -- Nearly 200 New Madrid County young people are employed in Youth Corps program school and civic projects, according to Bob Pulliam, supervisor - counsellor under the federal program to aid high school age youths during the summer.

Pulliam gave a breakdown of projects being undertaken by the Youth Corps personnel in several towns in the county.

Portageville has its workers building a cement parking lot and sidewalks for their whole school. They will use approximately 1,700 sacks of cement during this ten week project. They have three supervisors and 52 enrollees working at this time.

Risco does not have a project at its school, but they have employed six boys to work on the highway.

Howardville has 20 boys working at their school and various other places in the city. Approximately 12 boys are working in the city digging drainage ditches and doing other city maintenance while the remaining eight are working at the school. The work at the school consists of such things as sanding desks and painting rooms. They have already built a new baseball diamond and they hope to begin a quarter mile track in the near future.

At Lilbourn they have improved their baseball diamond, cut trees, and done general maintenance work at the school. The work at the school included sanding most of the desks and tables and painting rooms. Lilbourn also has several boys working on city parks and streets.

New Madrid employs 56 Youth Corp workers. The girls, under the supervision of Mrs. Dyke, are taking each school building and doing general maintenance such as cleaning and painting most of the rooms and varnishing tables, chairs, and desks. They have already completed work at the New Madrid High School and Junior High. Soon they will have completed the New Madrid Grade School building, then they plan to begin work on the O'Bannon School.

The boys, under Boon's supervision, have built a baseball diamond at the New Madrid High School and are building a track there. They have also done general maintenance work at the O'Bannon School. New Madrid has two lawn mowers that are constantly in use mowing the grounds of the schools and other public property. General maintenance work has been done at the city park and extensive work has been done to the Little League baseball field, including rebuilding the bleachers and painting all the areas around the fence that encloses it.

New Madrid also has around ten boys working for the street department and five are employed by the Light and Power company. A few other students are working in state offices in New Madrid doing secretarial work.

At Morehouse there are approximately 55 students employed. These students have painted and reworked nearly all of the Morehouse public schools. Several of their students have been assigned to do general maintenance work, painting and washing, at the city hall. After this they will build a park recreation building and complete a baseball diamond. Several other students are employed by the city department of Morehouse.

During a first-aid course for Girl Scouts, the question was asked, "What would you do if a child swallowed a house key?" One girl's reply: "I'd climb in through the window." —Modern Medicine

"If need be, we'll make every tree a school!"

Mexico's Minister of Education made this bold statement of an ambitious program in 1958.

In Mexico, where lumber is scarce and trees are protected with stringent modern forestry programs, the statement has even more meaning.

And Mexico has put that meaning into action. Our modern neighbor spends a quarter of its national budget on education. Mexico is in the middle of a program to build 39,000 new classrooms and train 67,000 new teachers by 1970 . . . and they're well ahead of schedule.

From 3,000 years of civilized traditions, Mexico has built a strong present . . . and they're teaching the youngsters how to build a strong future.

Knowledge of our modern neighbor is important in today's world. Add to your knowledge . . . send for the free booklet "Know Mexico", Box 1900, New York, 10019.

Mrs. Hearnes Wants Year Around Aid

"We just hope that this can be set up on a year around basis."

Thats what the First Lady of the state, Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, said yesterday about the head start program as she inspected the project in Sikeston.

She was accompanied from Jefferson City by Kenneth Rashid of Washington, D. C., regional director of the program; Phil Maher, Missouri director of the economic opportunity program and Randolph Halsy of his office in Jefferson City.

They made three inspections other than the one at Sikeston. They stopped at Caruthersville, Springfield and Columbia on a flying trip.

Mrs. Hearnes said that she was pleased with the program in Sikeston.

"You have good teachers," she said.

"I think this program is filling a long felt need. I have toured other places and everywhere I go I can see the need for the program is very large."

Rashid said:

"There will be results and accomplishments in the children that we may not see for four to five years. This program is called head start and for a good reason. The children who participate will be just eight weeks ahead of the children, who need the program but haven't been able to take part.

"There are 11 states in this region. However, Missouri would have to determine a leader in forming the program.

"Our purpose today is to see if the schools are doing what they were directed to do and so far every school that I have inspected has done much more than fill the essential requirements.

"We see these accomplishments and it encourages us to set the program up the year around."

In the program at Sikeston there are 160 students taking part.

In the state, 424 schools in 75 different counties are training 12,529 children.

District Split Studied

BENTON — The Scott County School board will meet Thursday night at the court house to explore possibilities of dividing the county into two school districts.

G. K. Patterson, president of the county board, said yesterday that a plan has not been submitted to the county board on the division plan.

He said "at the last meeting of the County Board, we proposed that each school district submit a plan to the board for re-organization. But, as to date, none have been received.

"The main gist of the talk that has been going around is that the boundary would be the Baseline Road. But, there is nothing concrete.

He said this about the beginning of the plan:

"The R-4 School District's (Kelly) Board president Tom Arnold wants the two districts, north and south. The state is after that district to build new buildings for their grade school program. This is what that district is waiting to get around.

"Oran, Chaffee and Illmo-Scott City are on record as being opposed to the redistricting."

Patterson was asked if he thought Sikeston, R-6, was interested in the redistricting.

He said, "Yes, but I don't know why Sikeston is wanting to participate.

"Although I wasn't present at the last meeting concerning redistricting, I understand that Harold Kiehne, Sikeston director of secondary education, put a motion on the floor in favor of the county being divided into north and south districts."

County Superintendent Ward Brasher, who is secretary to the county board, would not divulge the minutes of the May 17 meeting.

He said at first:

"I don't have the minutes in the proper form, but I can tell you what went on, which is simply everyone, (school districts), was asked to submit a plan to the county board."

He then said:

"I can't find the minutes of the meeting. They must have been misfiled somewhere."

The redistricting would mean that a new high school would have to be built in the north district, costing about one million dollars.

The bonding capacity, if the districts are divided at the Baseline Road would be around $450,000.

Rotary Club Gets Lesson In Printing

Rotarians learned about printing last night at their meeting in the Holiday Inn.

Allen Blanton, commercial printing manager of the Daily Standard, told the club that the Standard has five presses, two offset and the remainder letterpress.

He said that in the letterpress method printing is direct from type and that in the offset method the image is transferred to a blanket and the printing is from the blanket.

He described hot and cold type composition and used exhibits to explain. The Color King offset press used to print the newspaper and large commercial printing orders has a capacity of 16 full size newspaper pages and it can print in four colors in a single operation.

Hot type is either composed one letter at a time or in single lines as on a linecasting machine. In cold type composition, Blanton said, the alphabet is on film disk in a contact printer. The desired letters are exposed in sequence and a picture is taken of the line with the machine which can be pasted on a page. This is how headlines and large type are composed.

Smaller type is set by a process like typing and coded tape is fed into a machine which produces lines of printed material in black ink on white paper. These lines also are pasted on paper with wax.

When printed matter is pasted on a page a photograph is taken of it. The negative is exposed to an offset plate.

The Standard's camera can enlarge a picture up to 200 per cent and reduce one up to 50 per cent.

The Standard, Blanton said, is equipped to print anything from a small business card to a 22 inch by 28 inch placard. He invited the club to visit the plant and observe printing processes.

Max Smotherman, vocational instructor in the multi-occupations facility, said that four pair of eye glasses were needed by trainees. He asked the Rotary club to buy one pair of the glasses and said that the trainee would pay for them in weekly payments.

Harry C. Voght, Ellington, district governor of Rotary International, will make his official visit to the Rotary club at its meeting next Monday at 6 p.m. at the Holiday Inn. He will hold a club assembly during which club committee chairmen will tell their plans for the coming year's activities.

Mrs. Voght will meet with wives of Rotarians in another room at the Holiday Inn and will show pictures of her travels, club president Lucien Stoner announced.

Voght, a past president of his club, is area supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Last night's meeting was attended by two visiting Rotarians, Galen Ferrell and Paul Hill of the Charleston club; First Lt. Roy W. Clinton, stationed with a special services group in Viet Nam, a guest of Bill Jones; Harold Ploy, a student from Salzburg, Austria, a guest of James Green; Friederich Scheuer, Graz, Austria, student, a guest of Lennie Whitworth; Scout Executive Eddie Schrader a guest of Green. Richard Smith introduced his future son-in-law, Arthur Hobbs of Kansas City.

Robert Summers led the singing and Mary Ann Bruce accompanied at the piano.

Pope on Vacation

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy AP -- Pope Paul VI has arrived in the Roman hill town of Castel Gandolfo to begin his annual summer vacation.

450 Days Assessed

Judge M. E. Montgomery handed down a total of 450 days in jail sentences in this morning's session of Magistrate Court.

210 days of the jail sentences were on charges of fraudulent check writing.

Troy Ward, 307 Greer, was sentenced to a suspended 30 day jail term upon payment of court costs on the charges of writing $25 fraudulent checks.

Dorothy Pyke, 908 Ruth, pleaded guilty to three charges of fradulent checks. On each charge she was given a 30 day suspended jail sentence.

On the first charge, writing a fradulent check for $28.70, she was fined $28.70 and costs; a $9.80 fraudulent check brought a fine of $9.80 and costs; and a third fraudulent check for $9 drew a fine of $9 and costs.

Edward Pyke, 908 Ruth, was given a 30 day suspended jail term and was fined $8.19 and costs for writing a fraudulent check for $8.19.

Fred Castleberry, 522 Sikes, was given a 30 day suspended jail sentence and was fined $9.58 and cost for writing a fraudulent check for $9.58.

He was given a second 30 day suspended jail term and was fined $12.28 and costs for writing a $12.28 fraudulent check.

Faye Kirkpatrick, Benton, had the charge of fraudulent check writing continued for two weeks to obtain legal advice.

William Campbell, Fenton, was fined $5 and costs for having no operator-s license.

Calvin Clements, 235 N. Handy, was fined $5 and costs for having an improper muffler on vehicle.

He pleaded innocent to charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and disturbing the peace by use of loud and profane language and the cases were continued for one week.

LBJ's Move Surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson named Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg today to be the new U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

In a quickly arranged ceremony in the White House rose garden, the President, with Goldberg at his side, named his choice to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson.

Goldberg said the message of Adlai Stevenson to the world must continue — man's ancient supplication to "grant us peace."

And he promised to attempt to bring "the rule of law to relations between the various nations — it is that or doom and we all know that," Goldberg said.

The selection came as a surprise. Speculation had centered on the idea of a Cabinet reshuffle.

Congressional informants said Monday Johnson might offer the U.N. post to Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and they thought Rusk might be receptive.

Some of the talk revolved around the idea of shifting Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to the State Department.

Goldberg was the late President Kennedy's first appointment to the Supreme Court. Before that he served in the Cabinet as secretary of labor, after a long career as a labor lawyer.

Approval Given Nurse Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretaries of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare today approved a $207,351 grant to the Sikeston public schools for its third class this year in practical nursing.

Under auspices of the Manpower Development Training program, $145,050 will be used for training allowances and $62,301 for training costs, Senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long announced.

The 26-member practical nursing class will begin Monday, Administrative Assistant at the public schools, Harold Vogel, said. Another group of 26 will begin training in April he reported.

Taught by Mrs. Clara Eisenbach, a registered nurse, this is the third year the program has been operative in Sikeston. Two classes have been held earlier this year.

Four Hurt, Blame Speed

All Bootheel highway injuries reported for Monday came in two accidents near Poplar Bluff, attributed to speeding.

Three teenagers were injured in one of the accidents and one in another, the state highway patrol reported.

The three were injured in an accident two miles north of Fisk Sunday at 7 p.m. on county highway DD.

A 1965 Chevrolet pickup, driven by Vernice Howe, 17, Fisk, was rounding a curve when it left the roadway and struck a utility pole. Howe received a broken left arm and head cuts. He was taken to the Doctor's Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Two passengers, Rick Adams, 15, Fisk, received a possible back injury and was taken to the Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Rex Hancock, 15, Fisk, received head scrapes and a neck injury. He was taken to the Doctor's Hospital.

A 1964 Chevrolet pickup truck, driven by Charles St. Cin, 34, route four, Poplar Bluff, ran off a road two miles south of Poplar Bluff at 9 p.m. Monday and struck a tree. His face was cut and he suffered a possible chest injury. He was taken to Doctor's Hospital.

U.S. Grants Funds for Caruthersville Project

CARUTHERSVILLE —Mayor B. F. Rogers received a telegram Monday, announcing the approval of $22,656 from the Community Facilities Administration in Washington D.C., as a final payment on an engineering design in planning a $908,000 sewerage system.

The loan was made available because Caruthersville's location on the Mississippi river makes a special system necessary to send sewage away from the stream.

The city has been operating under a special permit to let their sewage into the river but the engineering firm of Owens and White, Baton Rouge, La., will now be able to complete plans to divert sewage from one to two miles from the city into a lagoon system.

Two years ago the city approved a $484,000 revenue bond issue, and an additional $424,000 is being sought from different federal agencies. With the approval of the new public works bill, the city will be able to complete the sewerage project.

The project is expected to get underway in 1966. It will include new trunk lines, four lift stations, and changing of many old, inadequate lines. About 30 per cent of the city is without sewer lines. The area would be added to the new project.

Working with the city administration to get this project completed were Sen. Stuart Symington, and Cong. Paul Jones, Kennett Democrat, who made special efforts in pushing river pollution bills in congress. Grants will be forthcoming from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

She-Angel Trumpeter on Christmas Stamp

WASHINGTON AP -- A postal inspection shows that it will be Gabrielle -- not Gabriel-- who will be blowing the trumpet on this year's Christmas postage stamps.

The figure of the winged trumpeter is that of a she-angel.

The Post Office Department announced last week that the stamp has been selected from a detail of a 1930 watercolor by Lucille Gloria Chabot. The painting, now on display at the National Gallery of Art, portrays the 1840 Gabriel weather vane atop the People's Methodist church in Newburyport, Mass.

After reading about the Post Office announcement identifying the yule trumpeter as the Archangel Gabriel, Morris Gordon of Bridgeport, Conn., wrote a letter to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski.

Gordon told Gronouski that "the torso part of the figure is feminine, and Gabriel's breast is that of a woman."

Gronouski dispatched an investigator to Newburyport. He reported that "when viewed through binoculars, it can be observed that the questioned section of the design has a very definite protrusion."

A biblical expert at the Catholic University of America, the Rev. Louis Hartman, explained the bulge this way: "Theologians tend to use anthropomorphism in describing God and the angels. In other words, they refer to these figures in masculine terms.

"But it has been traditional for religious artists to picture the angel with an effeminate and female aura, substance or form, although no one knows why."

Printing orders have been issued for 1.2 billion of the five-cent stamps.

Mrs. Hearnes Wants Year Around Aid

"We just hope that this can be set up on a year around basis."

Thats what the First Lady of the state, Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, said yesterday about the head start program as she inspected the project in Sikeston.

She was accompanied from Jefferson City by Kenneth Rashid of Washington, D. C., regional director of the program; Phil Maher, Missouri director of the economic opportunity program and Randolph Halsy of his office in Jefferson City.

They made three inspections other than the one at Sikeston. They stopped at Caruthersville, Springfield and Columbia on a flying trip.

Mrs. Hearnes said that she was pleased with the program in Sikeston.

"You have good teachers," she said.

"I think this program is filling a long felt need. I have toured other places and everywhere I go I can see the need for the program is very large."

Rashid said:

"There will be results and accomplishments in the children that we may not see for four to five years. This program is called head start and for a good reason. The children who participate will be just eight weeks ahead of the children, who need the program but haven't been able to take part.

"There are 11 states in this region. However, Missouri would have to determine a leader in forming the program.

"Our purpose today is to see if the schools are doing what they were directed to do and so far every school that I have inspected has done much more than fill the essential requirements.

"We see these accomplishments and it encourages us to set the program up the year around."

In the program at Sikeston there are 160 students taking part.

In the state, 424 schools in 75 different counties are training 12,529 children.

District Split Studied

BENTON — The Scott County School board will meet Thursday night at the court house to explore possibilities of dividing the county into two school districts.

G. K. Patterson, president of the county board, said yesterday that a plan has not been submitted to the county board on the division plan.

He said "at the last meeting of the County Board, we proposed that each school district submit a plan to the board for re-organization. But, as to date, none have been received.

"The main gist of the talk that has been going around is that the boundary would be the Baseline Road. But, there is nothing concrete.

He said this about the beginning of the plan:

"The R-4 School District's (Kelly) Board president Tom Arnold wants the two districts, north and south. The state is after that district to build new buildings for their grade school program. This is what that district is wanting to get around.

"Oran, Chaffee and Illmo-Scott City are on record as being opposed to the redistricting."

Patterson was asked if he thought Sikeston, R-6, was interested in the redistricting.

He said, "Yes, but I don't know why Sikeston is wanting to participate.

"Although I wasn't present at the last meeting concerning redistricting, I understand that Harold Kiehne, Sikeston director of secondary education, put a motion on the floor in favor of the county being divided into north and south districts."

County Superintendent Ward Brasher, who is secretary to the county board, would not divulge the minutes of the May 17 meeting.

He said at first:

"I don't have the minutes in the proper form, but I can tell you what went on, which is simply everyone, (school districts), was asked to submit a plan to the county board."

He then said:

"I can't find the minutes of the meeting. They must have been misfiled somewhere."

The redistricting would mean that a new high school would have to be built in the north district, costing about one million dollars.

The bonding capacity, if the districts are divided at the Baseline Road would be around $450,000.

Rotary Club Gets Lesson In Printing

Rotarians learned about printing last night at their meeting in the Holiday Inn.

Allen Blanton, commercial printing manager of the Daily Standard, told the club that the Standard has five presses, two offset and the remainder letterpress.

He said that in the letterpress method printing is direct from type and that in the offset method the image is transferred to a blanket and the printing is from the blanket.

He described hot and cold type composition and used exhibits to explain. The Color King offset press used to print the newspaper and large commercial printing orders has a capacity of 16 full size newspaper pages and it can print in four colors in a single operation.

Hot type is either composed one letter at a time or in single lines as on a linecasting machine. In cold type composition, Blanton said, the alphabet is on film disk in a contact printer. The desired letters are exposed in sequence and a picture is taken of the line with the machine which can be pasted on a page. This is how headlines and large type are composed.

Smaller type is set by a process like typing and coded tape is fed into a machine which produces lines of printed material in black ink on white paper. These lines also are pasted on paper with wax.

When printed matter is pasted on a page a photograph is taken of it. The negative is exposed to an offset plate.

The Standard's camera can enlarge a picture up to 200 per cent and reduce one up to 50 per cent.

The Standard, Blanton said, is equipped to print anything from a small business card to a 22 inch by 28 inch placard. He invited the club to visit the plant and observe printing processes.

Max Smotherman, vocational instructor in the multi-occupations facility, said that four pair of eye glasses were needed by trainees. He asked the Rotary club to buy one pair of the glasses and said that the trainee would pay for them in weekly payments.

Harry C. Voght, Ellington, district governor of Rotary International, will make his official visit to the Rotary club at its meeting next Monday at 6 p.m. at the Holiday Inn. He will hold a club assembly during which club committee chairmen will tell their plans for the coming year's activities.

Mrs. Voght will meet with wives of Rotarians in another room at the Holiday Inn and will show pictures of her travels, club president Lucien Stoner announced.

Voght, a past president of his club, is area supervisor of the Farmers Home Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Last night's meeting was attended by two visiting Rotarians, Galen Ferrell and Paul Hill of the Charleston club; First Lt. Roy W. Clinton, stationed with a special services group in Viet Nam, a guest of Bill Jones; Harold Ploy, a student from Salzburg, Austria, a guest of James Green; Friederich Scheuer, Graz, Austria, student, a guest of Lennie Whitworth; Scout Executive Eddie Schrader a guest of Green. Richard Smith introduced his future son-in-law, Arthur Hobbs of Kansas City.

Robert Summers led the singing and Mary Ann Bruce accompanied at the piano.

450 Days Assessed

Judge M. E. Montgomery handed down a total of 450 days in jail sentences in this morning's session of Magistrate Court.

210 days of the jail sentences were on charges of fraudulent check writing.

Troy Ward, 307 Greer, was sentenced to a suspended 30 day jail term upon payment of court costs on the charges of writing $25 fraudulent checks.

Dorothy Pyke, 908 Ruth, pleaded guilty to three charges of fradulent checks. On each charge she was given a 30 day suspended jail sentence.

On the first charge, writing a fradulent check for $28.70, she was fined $28.70 and costs; a $9.80 fraudulent check brought a fine of $9.80 and costs; and a third fraudulent check for $9 drew a fine of $9 and costs.

Edward Pyke, 908 Ruth, was given a 30 day suspended jail term and was fined $8.19 and costs for writing a fraudulent check for $8.19.

U.S. Grants Funds for Caruthersville Project

CARUTHERSVILLE —Mayor B. F. Rogers received a telegram Monday, announcing the approval of $22,656 from the Community Facilities Administration in Washington D.C., as a final payment on an engineering design in planning a $908,000 sewerage system.

The loan was made available because Caruthersville's location on the Mississippi river makes a special system necessary to send sewage away from the stream.

The city has been operating under a special permit to let their sewage into the river but the engineering firm of Owens and White, Baton Rouge, La., will now be able to complete plans to divert sewage from one to two miles from the city into a lagoon system.

Two years ago the city approved a $484,000 revenue bond issue, and an additional $424,000 is being sought from different federal agencies. With the approval of the new public works bill, the city will be able to complete the sewerage project.

The project is expected to get underway in 1966. It will include new trunk lines, four lift stations, and changing of many old, inadequate lines. About 30 per cent of the city is without sewer lines. The area would be added to the new project.

Working with the city administration to get this project completed were Sen. Stuart Symington, and Cong. Paul Jones, Kennett Democrat, who made special efforts in pushing river pollution bills in congress. Grants will be forthcoming from the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

She-Angel Trumpeter on Christmas Stamp

WASHINGTON AP -- A postal inspection shows that it will be Gabrielle -- not Gabriel-- who will be blowing the trumpet on this year's Christmas postage stamps.

The figure of the winged trumpeter is that of a she-angel.

The Post Office Department announced last week that the stamp has been selected from a detail of a 1930 watercolor by Lucille Gloria Chabot. The painting, now on display at the National Gallery of Art, portrays the 1840 Gabriel weather vane atop the People's Methodist church in Newburyport, Mass.

After reading about the Post Office announcement identifying the yule trumpeter as the Archangel Gabriel, Morris Gordon of Bridgeport, Conn., wrote a letter to Postmaster General John A. Gronouski.

Gordon told Gronouski that "the torso part of the figure is feminine, and Gabriel's breast is that of a woman."

Gronouski dispatched an investigator to Newburyport. He reported that "when viewed through binoculars, it can be observed that the questioned section of the design has a very definite protrusion."

A biblical expert at the Catholic University of America, the Rev. Louis Hartman, explained the bulge this way: "Theologians tend to use anthropomorphism in describing God and the angels. In other words, they refer to these figures in masculine terms.

"But it has been traditional for religious artists to picture the angel with an effeminate and female aura, substance or form, although no one knows why."

Printing orders have been issued for 1.2 billion of the five-cent stamps.

Newspapermen are not cast in a mold. They are an independent breed. This is true despite the tendencies by men in public life to generalize in their criticism of the press as if it were one and of Democratic politicians -- at least those of yesteryear-- to lambast the "one party press." All labels are meaningless and nonsense.

One of the nation's publishers who speaks his own mind is William Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union Leader in New Hampshire. His voice doesn't sound like those normally heard from the taciturn, independent Yankees of rock ribbed New England. It isn't either.

Loeb long ago withdrew from the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers Association. Recently he has urged the legislature to approve a bill, strongly opposed by the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers' association.

The bill would prevent the importation of professional strike-breakers into the state during labor troubles at newspaper plants and other establishments.

Daily newspapers are held by the federal government to be in interstate commerce but the International Typographical Union for purely selfish and obvious reasons is trying to remove them from this category as far as employment practices are concerned in a strike.

Loeb's condescending attitude toward the union may cause the printer's union and the other unions with which he deals to treat him more kindly in negotiations. There is no evidence that this will be the case. Unions have fought just as vigorously against their friends in management, who have been generally sympathetic to their point of view, as those who have vigorously opposed them in everything they have wanted step by step. Some newspaper men who have been soft on unions and who have championed their causes in the past are no longer in business. They are fallen targets of overwhelming and unreasoning union power, supported 100 per cent by a sympathetic federal government.

If Loeb's newspaper is ever struck by a union making unreasonable demands -- and many publishers have been he won't get any sympathy from anyone. He isn't entitled to any.

He is making the assumption that this won't happen, but the cemeteries are full of people who didn't think it would "happen to me."

Loeb says that he isn't interested in doing away with union representation" but if he cannot hire replacements during a strike he cannot win that strike regardless of how much merit there is on his side.

Union members have the right to strike. There is no argument about that.

But labor - management relations must become a two-way street if they are to be either fair or durable. Management should have an equal right to win a strike.

The only way that any newspaper publisher can win a strike is by continuing to publish. Any other course makes him the victim of any demand, however unfair, unreasonable and unrealistic it may be, by his employes.

This is the reason that all but two New York newspapers are fighting desperately for their lives. These papers are swimming in red ink in the futile effort to pay for exorbitant demands by the printers union, which won't permit any automation unless they are paid in addition any financial benefits resulting from the use of new printing methods. The newspapers cannot win a strike under present conditions.

If his newspaper is struck Loeb will learn quickly that he cannot hire any printers in Manchester or in New Hampshire regardless of how much they sympathize with his plight.

He won't be able to do this because any replacements will be frightened. There are easier ways of making a living than going through a picket line. The minimum expectation is a vile tongue lashing. There are others -- fear of violence to a person and to his property or a combination of the two and fear of other forms of retaliation, such as jeopardized future employment.

Under these circumstances Loeb would welcome the appearance of so-called out-of-state strikebreakers. When he needs them, he needn't look our way for understanding and sympathy. The New England Publishers' Association will turn a much colder shoulder in his direction.

Loeb is carelessly throwing away his own rights in his zeal to protect the rights of his employes. He is engaging in brinkmanship on a high wire. There is no net beneath.

It revealed: 14,163 twisted or broken during phone calls; 17,200 used to make temporary clothing repairs; 5,343 as toothpicks, 5,308 to groom fingernails; 3,196 as pipe cleaners; 19,143 as chips in card games; thousands dropped on the floor and swept away. Only 20,000 were used to clip papers together.

SCRATCHING THE SURFACE

It would appear that Robert G. Baker's $19,600 a year job in the Senate as secretary of the majority - which he resigned under fire last October - was small potatoes compared with his extra curricular activities.

Senate interest in his private affairs began when a $300,000 suit charging abuse of political influence in a vending machine deal was brought against him. Asked informally to explain this and reports of other business activities, Mr. Baker resigned and the current investigation by the Senate Rules Committee followed. While the probe has, thusfar, concerned itself entirely with the operations of Mr. Baker, it was ordered by the Senate to include investigation of the outside business interests of all Senate employees, both past and present. Just how far this may go and what the scope of involvements may be, remains to be seen.

That Mr. Baker was a busy man is indicated by reports credited to an unofficial but reliable source that he claimed in July 1962 to own assets worth more than a-million-and-a-half, made up mostly of securities and real estate.

After two days of closed door meetings, came the first public hearing, at which Mrs. Gertrude C. Novak, widow of a former partner of Mr. Baker's, testified that she and her husband bought stock on his advice and made a profit of $54,889 a year later, and which, by agreement, they split with Mr. Baker. She "assumed," Mrs. Novak said, that the Baker tip was based on "inside information" of a quick rise.

The Novaks were also partners with Mr. Baker in the swank, million dollar Carousel Motel at Ocean City, Md., which was a financial failure.

In her three-and-a-half hours of testimony, which occupied the entire session, Mrs. Novak told of being frightened at the large amounts of cash - as much as $13,000 - that Baker had turned over to her from time to time for deposit to the Carousel account.

It appears that there will be a considerable intermission before we see the next act of the Bobby Baker extravaganza, since Chief Counsel McLendon has said the Committee investigators may not finish their work until February. He also said hearings might go on for quite a while after that.

But it should be worth waiting for.

HIS REQUEST

The preacher in the small Southern town was giving his congregation plenty of fire and brimstone about the sinful life they were leading.

He finally shouted at his flock, "You'r sinful, sinful! Why, I don't believe that among the young ladies here there's one single virgin!" He glanced around with a challenge in his eye. "If there's a virgin in this congregation let her stand up!"

Finally, in the rear of the church a young married woman holding a baby in her arms got to her feet.

The minister sputtered. "M'am, I don't think you understood my demand. I said if there was a virgin in the congregation she should stand up."

"I understood, Reverend," the woman answered, "but you wouldn't want this two-month old girl to stand by herself, would you?"

"The only effective solution" to the decay of the dollar, "is drastically to reduce spending says the Citizens Foreign Aid Committee, of Washington, D. The termination of deficit spending will restore confidence in the dollar; it will arrest the flight of gold; it will prevent further dollar decay."

The population explosion is losing some of its steam in the United States.

According to statisticians the number of births decreased moderately in 1963, and at the year's end will be somewhat below the 1957 record peak of 4,300,000. Nevertheless, 1963, which will record a total of about 4,100,000 births, marks the tenth year in succession that births have exceeded four million.

Despite the recent declines, the rate for second births in 1963 will be only about one-sixth below the high point reached in 1949. Second births, which had numbered more than one million a year since 1947, are expected to fall slightly below that level this year, the statisticians report.

Third and subsequent births have been accounting for an increasing proportion of the total, from 38 percent in 1950 to about 49 percent now. The statisticians attribute this to the sustained high rate for third and fourth children.

For third births, the rate has been at least 30 per 1,000 married women under age 45 for more than a decade. The rate for fourth children has risen to about 20 per 1,000 in recent years. Fifth and higher order of births, too, have reached relatively high levels. Their number this year is not expected to be much below the 1961 all-time high of about 762,000, the statisticians concluded.

Hal Boyle

Editor's note--Hal Boyle has returned from an assignment to Viet Nam. This is his sign-off column from the war zone.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP--There is a time to stay and a time to go, and my time to leave South Viet Nam has come.

At least for now. The way the war is going, however, none can say how many who have served here for a while may be summoned to come again.

For this is the war nobody really knows. Most of us see only fragments of it -- even those in high places on both sides--and can only guess what final pattern will emerge.

But it is clear that many more American tears and much more American blood will be shed before the situation is ended by a political agreement or a battlefield conclusion.

We are no longer a referee or an umpire in a foreign civil struggle. We are no longer merely advisers. We are no longer simply pocketbook supporters of the side we favor. We are military participants and will become so in fuller measure.

Now we must supply more than cash. Now we must provide both backbone and muscle if we propose to continue here. And it would help the situation if we were to realize this fully ourselves.

It is easier to be an authority on the war in Viet Nam if you have never been here, or if you have been here 50 hours, than if you have been here 50 days or, probably, 50 months. It is easier to have hard and clear views as to how it can be settled.

The longer you stay here the more difficult it is to be sure you understand what really is going on, or whether any solution offered is the right and satisfactory one.

Here are a few of the confusing things you run into in this most bewildering of wars:

The land is lovely, but it is studded with millions of hidden bamboo and steel pike traps that will rip an unwary foot through the bone.

The people seem, on the whole, friendly to the American outsider. But a cousin of the smiling little boy you pat on the head this morning may blow up your billet tonight.

There are no fixed lines as in previous wars. The enemy is before you, beside you, and behind you. There is no absolute test to tell friend from foe.

Our side holds the big cities; their side holds most of the countryside. But they have fifth columns in every city, and we are trying to infiltrate the land areas they run.

Our side has all the necessary big weapons to win an orthodox war -- from aircraft carriers to self-propelled guns. But they know better how and where and when to ambush us than we seem to know how, where and when to ambush them.

The more Viet Cong we kill, the more of them come into the fight.

Some hold the war can never be won on the battlefield by either side, and that the only answer to military stalemate is diplomatic bargaining.

Some hold that diplomatic compromise would only postpone the issue. They feel that after a pause of a few months or years the Viet Cong would take over political power they have been unable so far to achieve by ambush.

This, in summary, is the present state of the war nobody knows the outcome of.

But it is obvious that we can no longer win it with a checkbook alone. As scores of thousands more U. S. troops make the long journey to Viet Nam, what they do there will bring home to us all the deepening price we must pay if we are to achieve our purpose in this mixed-up land.

If the women get their way, they won't take half but all when they haul the scoundrel into court, having given up the best years of their life,etc.

H. L. Hunt Says

MAO'S STRATEGY IN VIET NAM

For a long time we were supposed to believe that all the trouble in Viet Nam was the work of local rebels, the Viet Cong. Now it is admitted, and stressed even in official statements, that what the Viet Cong seemed to be doing is really being done by North Viet Nam and its Red leader, Ho Chi Minh.

The final step in getting at the truth is to recognize in turn that the real source of the strategy of the Viet Nam war, as well as its essential support, is Peking and Chairman Mao of Red China.

To see this clearly, it is only necessary to look at what is happening in the Viet Nam war and compare it with Mao's own handbook of strategy, a series of lectures in 1938 later published under the title, "On the Protracted War."

Mao's strategy rejects the idea of the quick decisive battle which seems natural to us in the West. Instead it calls for a gradual wearing away of the anti-communist will to fight, through guerrilla war at the point of conflict and propaganda war on the enemy's home front. The aim of the propaganda war is to undermine popular support for firm resistance to communism.

In the ugly tactics of demonstrations, hysterical denunciation of American policy, and vicious harassment of the families of Americans killed in action in Viet Nam, we see Mao's strategy for his enemy's home front working in the very heart of our own country.

That this could "happen here" is nearly unbelievable although the Communists seldom ever miss a trick. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The news story that caused the sharpest flap over President Johnson's press relations pertained to some general ideas of the late Adlai Stevenson regarding U. N. Article 19, which requires member nations to pay their dues or else lose their vote in the U. N. Assembly.

Before the flap subsided, the President was accused by one newsman of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion" lasting "six solid hours" because some of the facts in his proposed San Francisco U. N. speech regarding Article 19 had leaked to the press and he therefore changed it.

The man who so accused him was my distinguished colleague, Joe Alsop. And the man responsible for the alleged leak was another distinguished colleague, James Reston of the New York Times.

It is not unusual for presidents to lose their tempers over news stories. I recall how President Hoover got so riled at the foreign dispatches of the Chicago Daily News in 1930 that he called in its publisher, Col. Frank Knox, and demanded that his foreign editor, Paul Scott Mowrer, and his London correspondent, Constantine Brown, be fired. Knox refused.

In the same administration, Hoover's Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley, paced the floor for half an hour scolding me because I reported that he practiced entrances to White House receptions before a mirror. He boasted that he was going to get my job with the Baltimore Sun. Next week I was fired.

If the present President of the United States did change his speech before the United Nations at San Francisco as alleged by Alsop because Reston leaked it in advance; and if he also engaged in "six solid hours" of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion," then the public ought to know the details, so I went to the highest sources to check them out.

--CAUTIOUS LBJ--

I found that sometime prior to the San Francisco speech commemorating the U. N.'s twentieth anniversary, some ideas for the speech were sent the White House by Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary for U. N. Affairs, and members of his staff. They suggested that Johnson announce at San Francisco a modification of Article 19 so that peace-keeping dues to the U. N. would be on a voluntary, not a compulsory, basis. Simultaneously the United States was to announce a voluntary contribution.

Presidential reaction was cautious. Johnson said he could not alter the American policy toward Article 19 without consulting the Congress and our NATO allies.

"We've got to consult with Dirksen (the Republican senator from Illinois) who has gone along with us on a lot of things," the President was quoted as telling his advisers. "And we ought to talk to Bourke Hickenlooper, (Republican senator from Iowa) who has been very helpful regarding the loan to the United Nations.

"You get Adlai Stevenson to come down and appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and tell them what he has in mind, and then we'll see if we can work out a proposal for the U. N. General Assembly in September," he was quoted as saying. "We can't take this up in San Francisco."

On June 20, John Pomfret, the New York Times correspondent covering the White House, asked whether the President planned to speak on Article 19 at San Francisco and was given a negative reply. Next day, Reston published a carefully worded report that President Johnson was "being strongly urged" to give up the fight to force U. N. members to pay for U. N. peace-keeping armies and to place the Viet Nam war before the U. N. Reston added that he was expected to do the first, not the second.

Four days later Johnson spoke at San Francisco and did neither.

--ERRONEOUS FACTS--

Ten days later, Alsop reported that Reston's story had been greeted by "one of those outbursts of Johnsonian anger that sometimes make Washington nowadays seem like Captain Bligh's Bounty."

Alsop also reported that in order that no one "should know the President's thought before its official disclosure,. . .the Secretary of State and one of his chief subordinates were kept at the White House until 2 a.m. one morning reworking the President's U. N. anniversary speech."

I was further informed on excellent authority that the President did not spend six hours ranting against the Reston column, but that he had been curious as to where Alsop got his facts and had asked the State Department about.

He was informed that Alsop had spent considerable time trying to see the Secretary of State and Head of Central Intelligence without success and seemed quite peeved about it.

I was also informed that the material for the President's speech came from the book of Barbara Ward, "The Rich Nations and the Poor Nations," which she had given to LBJ some months ago. The actual text of the speech, 80 per cent of it, was written several weeks prior to San Francisco.

These are rather pickayunish molehills for the country to be concerned about compared with the legislative mountains of Medicare and Negro voting rights. Nevertheless, they seem to be what concerns many of our opinion makers today.

--U. S.-JAPANESE CABINET TALKS--

Japanese cabinet members didn't thumb their noses at the United States during the joint cabinet talks last week, but in a very polite and dignified way they came close to doing so.

The Japanese were more independent, more adamant in opposing some American policies, and more aloof than our involvement in Viet Nam than at any time since the end of the war.

The meeting, even though not especially productive, was considered a healthy one, chiefly because it showed that exenemies, now allies, could engage in frank discussion.

Two factors influenced the Japanese - American cabinet talks:

1. The growth of Japanese Nationalism.

2. The disapproval of America's policy in North Viet Nam.

The American embassy in Tokyo had reported some time before this that, as of last February, American popularity in Japan suddenly took a serious downward turn. The drop was associated 100 per cent with our policy of bombing North Viet Nam.

Inasmuch as Japan was subject to bombardment itself during the war, it could understand the reaction of the North Vietnamese. There was also a certain feeling of sympathy with another Asiatic country, coupled with resentment against a country considered the most powerful nation in the world.

While there was never any discussion of racial kinship with the Vietnamese as against the white citizens of the United States, nevertheless there had been an undertone.

--JAPAN'S EXPERIENCE IN CHINA--

Japanese officials have not been publicly critical of the United States over Viet Nam, but the Japanese people have. Privately, the Japanese cabinet members have argued with top American officials, pointing out that they are embarked on a "no win" policy in Viet Nam.

"We had the same experience in China," the Japanese have advised. "The more we fought, the more we lost. You can't invade the Asiatic continent, especially a jungle area, and win. You're licked even before you start."

Anti-American sentiment has become so strong that Ambassador Edwin Reischauer, married to the daughter of a former Japanese prime minister, and one of the most popular envoys the United States has even sent to Japan, has had to curtail his public speeches.

During the Japanese - American cabinet talks, the Japanese made the following general points:

A. They would have nothing to do with our policy in Viet Nam and definitely would not participate in economic aid for that area.

B. The Japanese are delighted to participate in economic aid for the rest of Southeast Asia, especially Burma and the Philippines. They are not enthusiastic over getting involved with President Sukarno in Indonesia.

C. Japan was insistent that she get landing privileges in New York and the right to fly across the American continent. It was pointed out that Pan American Airways could not possibly fly around the world unless it landed in Tokyo, and that Japan would expect to have reciprocal rights in the United States.

When American officials pointed out that the Italians asked for the same rights across the USA but were nied, the Japanese replied: "But Rome is not Tokyo. You can fly across Europe without landing in Rome but you can't fly across the North Pacific without landing in Tokyo."

It was agreed that Japanese-American talks would be held to adjust this problem.

D. The Japanese flatly refused to curtail their trade with Red China. In fact, they are pushing it.

E. Japan will support the United States in its policy toward Nationalist China and is quite proud of its relations with Formosa, a former Japanese colony.

F. Japan will continue its friendly relations with Korea and endeavor to improve them. The United States officially is not having anything to do with this, though on the Q. T. it has been helping both the Japanese and the Koreans to forget their old bitterness.

Next to the hassle over air-landing privileges, the biggest hassle was over fish. This is a relatively minor industry totaling only about eight to ten million dollars a year. The fishing problem is still unsolved.

At one point, President Johnson remarked to Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee: "I better not invite you to the White House for lunch with the Japanese. You'll get into an argument over fish."

Magnuson was invited to lunch, but did not get into an argument. At one point, the Japanese minister of transport remarked to him: "Fishing very good this year. Next year not so good."

He referred to the fact the salmon catch was estimated at 25 million pounds this year but went up to 38 million instead.

--U. S.-JAPANESE TRADE--

The Japanese cabinet members complained vigorously about growing American trade restrictions. American cabinet members countered that 28 per cent of all Japanese exports came to the United States, which is far greater than the 2.6 per cent of Japanese exports to Red China.

At one point, Japanese demands became so vigorous that Secretary Rusk gave this reminder:

"You forget that Japanese prosperity is due in large part to the fact that you don't have to spend any money on your defenses. The United States supplies your defense."

The Japanese, who devoutly do not want another war, have been afraid that the Johnson administration would escalate war in Viet Nam. They know this would mean retaliation against the No. 1 American base in the Northern Pacific, Okinawa. If Okinawa were bombed, Japan would be dragged into World War III.

This was the shadow which hung over the conference table in Washington last week.

Newspapermen are not cast in a mold. They are an independent breed. This is true despite the tendencies by men in public life to generalize in their criticism of the press as if it were one and of Democratic politicians -- at least those of yesteryear-- to lambast the "one party press." All labels are meaningless and nonsense.

One of the nation's publishers who speaks his own mind is William Loeb, publisher of the Manchester Union Leader in New Hampshire. His voice doesn't sound like those normally heard from the taciturn, independent Yankees of rock ribbed New England. It isn't either.

Loeb long ago withdrew from the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers Association. Recently he has urged the legislature to approve a bill, strongly opposed by the New England Daily Newspaper Publishers' association.

The bill would prevent the importation of professional strike-breakers into the state during labor troubles at newspaper plants and other establishments.

Daily newspapers are held by the federal government to be in interstate commerce but the International Typographical Union for purely selfish and obvious reasons is trying to remove them from this category as far as employment practices are concerned in a strike.

Loeb's condescending attitude toward the union may cause the printer's union and the other unions with which he deals to treat him more kindly in negotiations. There is no evidence that this will be the case. Unions have fought just as vigorously against their friends in management, who have been generally sympathetic to their point of view, as those who have vigorously opposed them in everything they have wanted step by step. Some newspaper men who have been soft on unions and who have championed their causes in the past are no longer in business. They are fallen targets of overwhelming and unreasoning union power, supported 100 per cent by a sympathetic federal government.

If Loeb's newspaper is ever struck by a union making unreasonable demands -- and many publishers have been he won't get any sympathy from anyone. He isn't entitled to any.

He is making the assumption that this won't happen, but the cemeteries are full of people who didn't think it would "happen to me."

Loeb says that he isn't interested in doing away with union representation" but if he cannot hire replacements during a strike he cannot win that strike regardless of how much merit there is on his side.

Union members have the right to strike. There is no argument about that.

But labor - management relations must become a two-way street if they are to be either fair or durable. Management should have an equal right to win a strike.

The only way that any newspaper publisher can win a strike is by continuing to publish. Any other course makes him the victim of any demand, however unfair, unreasonable and unrealistic it may be, by his employes.

This is the reason that all but two New York newspapers are fighting desperately for their lives. These papers are swimming in red ink in the futile effort to pay for exorbitant demands by the printers union, which won't permit any automation unless they are paid in addition any financial benefits resulting from the use of new printing methods. The newspapers cannot win a strike under present conditions.

If his newspaper is struck Loeb will learn quickly that he cannot hire any printers in Manchester or in New Hampshire regardless of how much they sympathize with his plight.

He won't be able to do this because any replacements will be frightened. There are easier ways of making a living than going through a picket line. The minimum expectation is a vile tongue lashing. There are others -- fear of violence to a person and to his property or a combination of the two and fear of other forms of retaliation, such as jeopardized future employment.

Under these circumstances Loeb would welcome the appearance of so-called out-of-state strikebreakers. When he needs them, he needn't look our way for understanding and sympathy. The New England Publishers' Association will turn a much colder shoulder in his direction.

Loeb is carelessly throwing away his own rights in his zeal to protect the rights of his employes. He is engaging in brinkmanship on a high wire. There is no net beneath.

It revealed: 14,163 twisted or broken during phone calls; 17,200 used to make temporary clothing repairs; 5,343 as toothpicks, 5,308 to groom fingernails; 3,196 as pipe cleaners; 19,143 as chips in card games; thousands dropped on the floor and swept away. Only 20,000 were used to clip papers together.

SCRATCHING THE SURFACE

It would appear that Robert G. Baker's $19,600 a year job in the Senate as secretary of the majority - which he resigned under fire last October - was small potatoes compared with his extra curricular activities.

Senate interest in his private affairs began when a $300,000 suit charging abuse of political influence in a vending machine deal was brought against him. Asked informally to explain this and reports of other business activities, Mr. Baker resigned and the current investigation by the Senate Rules Committee followed. While the probe has, thusfar, concerned itself entirely with the operations of Mr. Baker, it was ordered by the Senate to include investigation of the outside business interests of all Senate employees, both past and present. Just how far this may go and what the scope of involvements may be, remains to be seen.

That Mr. Baker was a busy man is indicated by reports credited to an unofficial but reliable source that he claimed in July 1962 to own assets worth more than a-million-and-a-half, made up mostly of securities and real estate.

After two days of closed door meetings, came the first public hearing, at which Mrs. Gertrude C. Novak, widow of a former partner of Mr. Baker's, testified that she and her husband bought stock on his advice and made a profit of $54,889 a year later, and which, by agreement, they split with Mr. Baker. She "assumed," Mrs. Novak said, that the Baker tip was based on "inside information" of a quick rise.

The Novaks were also partners with Mr. Baker in the swank, million dollar Carousel Motel at Ocean City, Md., which was a financial failure.

In her three-and-a-half hours of testimony, which occupied the entire session, Mrs. Novak told of being frightened at the large amounts of cash - as much as $13,000 - that Baker had turned over to her from time to time for deposit to the Carousel account.

It appears that there will be a considerable intermission before we see the next act of the Bobby Baker extravaganza, since Chief Counsel McLendon has said the Committee investigators may not finish their work until February. He also said hearings might go on for quite a while after that.

But it should be worth waiting for.

HIS REQUEST

The preacher in the small Southern town was giving his congregation plenty of fire and brimstone about the sinful life they were leading.

He finally shouted at his flock, "You'r sinful, sinful! Why, I don't believe that among the young ladies here there's one single virgin!" He glanced around with a challenge in his eye. "If there's a virgin in this congregation let her stand up!"

Finally, in the rear of the church a young married woman holding a baby in her arms got to her feet.

The minister sputtered. "M'am, I don't think you understood my demand. I said if there was a virgin in the congregation she should stand up."

"I understood, Reverend," the woman answered, "but you wouldn't want this two-month old girl to stand by herself, would you?"

The termination of deficit spending will restore confidence in the dollar; it will arrest the flight of gold; it will prevent further dollar decay."

The population explosion is losing some of its steam in the United States.

According to statisticians the number of births decreased moderately in 1963, and at the year's end will be somewhat below the 1957 record peak of 4,300,000. Nevertheless, 1963, which will record a total of about 4,100,000 births, marks the tenth year in succession that births have exceeded four million.

Despite the recent declines, the rate for second births in 1963 will be only about one-sixth below the high point reached in 1949. Second births, which had numbered more than one million a year since 1947, are expected to fall slightly below that level this year, the statisticians report.

Third and subsequent births have been accounting for an increasing proportion of the total, from 38 percent in 1950 to about 49 percent now. The statisticians attribute this to the sustained high rate for third and fourth children.

For third births, the rate has been at least 30 per 1,000 married women under age 45 for more than a decade. The rate for fourth children has risen to about 20 per 1,000 in recent years. Fifth and higher order of births, too, have reached relatively high levels. Their number this year is not expected to be much below the 1961 all-time high of about 762,000, the statisticians concluded.

Hal Boyle

Editor's note--Hal Boyle has returned from an assignment to Viet Nam. This is his sign-off column from the war zone.

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP--There is a time to stay and a time to go, and my time to leave South Viet Nam has come.

At least for now. The way the war is going, however, none can say how many who have served here for a while may be summoned to come again.

For this is the war nobody really knows. Most of us see only fragments of it -- even those in high places on both sides--and can only guess what final pattern will emerge.

But it is clear that many more American tears and much more American blood will be shed before the situation is ended by a political agreement or a battlefield conclusion.

We are no longer a referee or an umpire in a foreign civil struggle. We are no longer merely advisers. We are no longer simply pocketbook supporters of the side we favor. We are military participants and will become so in fuller measure.

Now we must supply more than cash. Now we must provide both backbone and muscle if we propose to continue here. And it would help the situation if we were to realize this fully ourselves.

It is easier to be an authority on the war in Viet Nam if you have never been here, or if you have been here 50 hours, than if you have been here 50 days or, probably, 50 months. It is easier to have hard and clear views as to how it can be settled.

The longer you stay here the more difficult it is to be sure you understand what really is going on, or whether any solution offered is the right and satisfactory one.

Here are a few of the confusing things you run into in this most bewildering of wars:

The land is lovely, but it is studded with millions of hidden bamboo and steel pike traps that will rip an unwary foot through the bone.

The people seem, on the whole, friendly to the American outsider. But a cousin of the smiling little boy you pat on the head this morning may blow up your billet tonight.

There are no fixed lines as in previous wars. The enemy is before you, beside you, and behind you. There is no absolute test to tell friend from foe.

Our side holds the big cities; their side holds most of the countryside. But they have fifth columns in every city, and we are trying to infiltrate the land areas they run.

Our side has all the necessary big weapons to win an orthodox war -- from aircraft carriers to self-propelled guns. But they know better how and where and when to ambush us than we seem to know how, where and when to ambush them.

The more Viet Cong we kill, the more of them come into the fight.

Some hold the war can never be won on the battlefield by either side, and that the only answer to military stalemate is diplomatic bargaining.

Some hold that diplomatic compromise would only postpone the issue. They feel that after a pause of a few months or years the Viet Cong would take over political power they have been unable so far to achieve by ambush.

This, in summary, is the present state of the war nobody knows the outcome of.

But it is obvious that we can no longer win it with a checkbook alone. As scores of thousands more U. S. troops make the long journey to Viet Nam, what they do there will bring home to us all the deepening price we must pay if we are to achieve our purpose in this mixed-up land.

If the women get their way, they won't take half but all when they haul the scoundrel into court, having given up the best years of their life,etc.

H. L. Hunt Says

MAO'S STRATEGY IN VIET NAM

For a long time we were supposed to believe that all the trouble in Viet Nam was the work of local rebels, the Viet Cong. Now it is admitted, and stressed even in official statements, that what the Viet Cong seemed to be doing is really being done by North Viet Nam and its Red leader, Ho Chi Minh.

The final step in getting at the truth is to recognize in turn that the real source of the strategy of the Viet Nam war, as well as its essential support, is Peking and Chairman Mao of Red China.

To see this clearly, it is only necessary to look at what is happening in the Viet Nam war and compare it with Mao's own handbook of strategy, a series of lectures in 1938 later published under the title, "On the Protracted War."

Mao's strategy rejects the idea of the quick decisive battle which seems natural to us in the West. Instead it calls for a gradual wearing away of the anti-communist will to fight, through guerrilla war at the point of conflict and propaganda war on the enemy's home front. The aim of the propaganda war is to undermine popular support for firm resistance to communism.

In the ugly tactics of demonstrations, hysterical denunciation of American policy, and vicious harassment of the families of Americans killed in action in Viet Nam, we see Mao's strategy for his enemy's home front working in the very heart of our own country.

That this could "happen here" is nearly unbelievable although the Communists seldom ever miss a trick. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The news story that caused the sharpest flap over President Johnson's press relations pertained to some general ideas of the late Adlai Stevenson regarding U. N. Article 19, which requires member nations to pay their dues or else lose their vote in the U. N. Assembly.

Before the flap subsided, the President was accused by one newsman of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion" lasting "six solid hours" because some of the facts in his proposed San Francisco U. N. speech regarding Article 19 had leaked to the press and he therefore changed it.

The man who so accused him was my distinguished colleague, Joe Alsop. And the man responsible for the alleged leak was another distinguished colleague, James Reston of the New York Times.

It is not unusual for presidents to lose their tempers over news stories. I recall how President Hoover got so riled at the foreign dispatches of the Chicago Daily News in 1930 that he called in its publisher, Col. Frank Knox, and demanded that his foreign editor, Paul Scott Mowrer, and his London correspondent, Constantine Brown, be fired. Knox refused.

In the same administration, Hoover's Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley, paced the floor for half an hour scolding me because I reported that he practiced entrances to White House receptions before a mirror. He boasted that he was going to get my job with the Baltimore Sun. Next week I was fired.

If the present President of the United States did change his speech before the United Nations at San Francisco as alleged by Alsop because Reston leaked it in advance; and if he also engaged in "six solid hours" of a "pseudo-volcanic explosion," then the public ought to know the details, so I went to the highest sources to check them out.

--CAUTIOUS LBJ--

I found that sometime prior to the San Francisco speech commemorating the U. N.'s twentieth anniversary, some ideas for the speech were sent the White House by Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary for U. N. Affairs, and members of his staff. They suggested that Johnson announce at San Francisco a modification of Article 19 so that peace-keeping dues to the U. N. would be on a voluntary, not a compulsory, basis. Simultaneously the United States was to announce a voluntary contribution.

Presidential reaction was cautious. Johnson said he could not alter the American policy toward Article 19 without consulting the Congress and our NATO allies.

"We've got to consult with Dirksen (the Republican senator from Illinois) who has gone along with us on a lot of things," the President was quoted as telling his advisers. "And we ought to talk to Bourke Hickenlooper, (Republican senator from Iowa) who has been very helpful regarding the loan to the United Nations.

"You get Adlai Stevenson to come down and appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and tell them what he has in mind, and then we'll see if we can work out a proposal for the U. N. General Assembly in September," he was quoted as saying. "We can't take this up in San Francisco."

On June 20, John Pomfret, the New York Times correspondent covering the White House, asked whether the President planned to speak on Article 19 at San Francisco and was given a negative reply. Next day, Reston published a carefully worded report that President Johnson was "being strongly urged" to give up the fight to force U. N. members to pay for U. N. peace-keeping armies and to place the Viet Nam war before the U. N. Reston added that he was expected to do the first, not the second.

Four days later Johnson spoke at San Francisco and did neither.

--ERRONEOUS FACTS--

Ten days later, Alsop reported that Reston's story had been greeted by "one of those outbursts of Johnsonian anger that sometimes make Washington nowadays seem like Captain Bligh's Bounty."

Alsop also reported that in order that no one "should know the President's thought before its official disclosure,. . .the Secretary of State and one of his chief subordinates were kept at the White House until 2 a.m. one morning reworking the President's U. N. anniversary speech."

I was further informed on excellent authority that the President did not spend six hours ranting against the Reston column, but that he had been curious as to where Alsop got his facts and had asked the State Department about.

He was informed that Alsop had spent considerable time trying to see the Secretary of State and Head of Central Intelligence without success and seemed quite peeved about it.

I was also informed that the material for the President's speech came from the book of Barbara Ward, "The Rich Nations and the Poor Nations," which she had given to LBJ some months ago. The actual text of the speech, 80 per cent of it, was written several weeks prior to San Francisco.

These are rather pickayunish molehills for the country to be concerned about compared with the legislative mountains of Medicare and Negro voting rights. Nevertheless, they seem to be what concerns many of our opinion makers today.

--U. S.-JAPANESE CABINET TALKS--

Japanese cabinet members didn't thumb their noses at the United States during the joint cabinet talks last week, but in a very polite and dignified way they came close to doing so.

The Japanese were more independent, more adamant in opposing some American policies, and more aloof than our involvement in Viet Nam than at any time since the end of the war.

The meeting, even though not especially productive, was considered a healthy one, chiefly because it showed that exenemies, now allies, could engage in frank discussion.

Two factors influenced the Japanese - American cabinet talks:

1. The growth of Japanese Nationalism.

2. The disapproval of America's policy in North Viet Nam.

The American embassy in Tokyo had reported some time before this that, as of last February, American popularity in Japan suddenly took a serious downward turn. The drop was associated 100 per cent with our policy of bombing North Viet Nam.

Inasmuch as Japan was subject to bombardment itself during the war, it could understand the reaction of the North Vietnamese. There was also a certain feeling of sympathy with another Asiatic country, coupled with resentment against a country considered the most powerful nation in the world.

While there was never any discussion of racial kinship with the Vietnamese as against the white citizens of the United States, nevertheless there had been an undertone.

--JAPAN'S EXPERIENCE IN CHINA--

Japanese officials have not been publicly critical of the United States over Viet Nam, but the Japanese people have. Privately, the Japanese cabinet members have argued with top American officials, pointing out that they are embarked on a "no win" policy in Viet Nam.

"We had the same experience in China," the Japanese have advised. "The more we fought, the more we lost. You can't invade the Asiatic continent, especially a jungle area, and win. You're licked even before you start."

Anti-American sentiment has become so strong that Ambassador Edwin Reischauer, married to the daughter of a former Japanese prime minister, and one of the most popular envoys the United States has even sent to Japan, has had to curtail his public speeches.

During the Japanese - American cabinet talks, the Japanese made the following general points:

A. They would have nothing to do with our policy in Viet Nam and definitely would not participate in economic aid for that area.

B. The Japanese are delighted to participate in economic aid for the rest of Southeast Asia, especially Burma and the Philippines. They are not enthusiastic over getting involved with President Sukarno in Indonesia.

C. Japan was insistent that she get landing privileges in New York and the right to fly across the American continent. It was pointed out that Pan American Airways could not possibly fly around the world unless it landed in Tokyo, and that Japan would expect to have reciprocal rights in the United States.

When American officials pointed out that the Italians asked for the same rights across the USA but were nied, the Japanese replied: "But Rome is not Tokyo. You can fly across Europe without landing in Rome but you can't fly across the North Pacific without landing in Tokyo."

It was agreed that Japanese-American talks would be held to adjust this problem.

D. The Japanese flatly refused to curtail their trade with Red China. In fact, they are pushing it.

E. Japan will support the United States in its policy toward Nationalist China and is quite proud of its relations with Formosa, a former Japanese colony.

F. Japan will continue its friendly relations with Korea and endeavor to improve them. The United States officially is not having anything to do with this, though on the Q. T. It has been helping both the Japanese and the Koreans to forget their old bitterness.

Next to the hassle over air-landing privileges, the biggest hassle was over fish. This is a relatively minor industry totaling only about eight to ten million dollars a year. The fishing problem is still unsolved.

At one point, President Johnson remarked to Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee: "I better not invite you to the White House for lunch with the Japanese. You'll get into an argument over fish."

Magnuson was invited to lunch, but did not get into an argument. At one point, the Japanese minister of transport remarked to him: "Fishing very good this year. Next year not so good."

He referred to the fact the salmon catch was estimated at 25 million pounds this year but went up to 38 million instead.

--U. S.-JAPANESE TRADE--

The Japanese cabinet members complained vigorously about growing American trade restrictions. American cabinet members countered that 28 per cent of all Japanese exports came to the United States, which is far greater than the 2.6 per cent of Japanese exports to Red China.

At one point, Japanese demands became so vigorous that Secretary Rusk gave this reminder:

"You forget that Japanese prosperity is due in large part to the fact that you don't have to spend any money on your defenses. The United States supplies your defense."

The Japanese, who devoutly do not want another war, have been afraid that the Johnson administration would escalate war in Viet Nam. They know this would mean retaliation against the No. 1 American base in the Northern Pacific, Okinawa. If Okinawa were bombed, Japan would be dragged into World War III.

This was the shadow which hung over the conference table in Washington last week.

Carolyn Sue Westfall Is July Bride Of Don Cannon

MORLEY: In a beautiful and impressive ceremony Friday, July 2, at the Baptist Church, Miss Carolyn Sue Westfall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flavel C. Westfall of Morehouse, became the bride of Donald Wade Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cannon, Morley, Mo.

Rev. Liston Smith, pastor, officiated the double ring ceremony, in the presence of many friends and relatives.

The church altar was decorated with baskets of white gladiolus and a fifteen branch candelabra. The aisle of the church was also annointed with six single branch candelabra. The candle lighters were Misses Susy King and Elaine Jackson, friends of the bride and groom. They were identically dressed in light blue chiffon over taffeta and wore corsages of white carnations.

Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Robert Daugherty at the organ. Mrs. Rex Montgomery, soloist, sang "Always" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride approached the altar on the arm of her father who escorted her down the bridal aisle and gave her in marriage. For her wedding the bride chose a floor length gown of chantilly lace over taffeta and net. The gown featured a scalloped neckline with long sleeves that came to a point at the wrist. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was secured with a crown of seeded pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with a white orchid atop a white Bible.

Miss Westfall chose Miss Lois McFerrow as her maid of honor, and the bridesmaid was Miss Mary Lou Lincoln. They were attired in dresses of light blue taffeta and each carried a bouquet of carnations tinted blue, and their veils were secured with blue carnations.

Attending Mr. Cannon as best man was David Cannon, brother of the groom. Groomsman was Winford Farrow, friend of the groom. Serving as ushers were Rex Montgomery and Gene Hudson.

Mrs. Linda King of Cape Girardeau presided at the guest book.

A reception was held in the church basement. The bride's table was annointed with a three tier wedding cake, topped by the traditional miniature bride and groom, a crystal punch bowl at each end of the table completed the arrangement.

Assisting at the brides' table were Mrs. Paula Cannon, Mrs. Susan Farrar, Mrs. Anita Freed and Mrs. Marie Abernathy.

The couple took a short wedding trip to Clearwater Lake and are now at home to their friends at Morley, Mo.

---

The former Miss Carolyn Sue Westfall, was honored with a bridal shower at the Morehouse - Delmo community building. The bride's chosen colors of blue and white were dominant throughout the theme. The gift table was covered with a blue table cloth and decorated with white wedding bells.

Refreshments of punch and cake were served.

Those attending or sending gifts were Mrs. Donnie Sterling, Mrs. Barbara Nimmo, Mrs. Westfall, Mrs. Dora Holder, Miss Anita Sullivan, Mrs. Rosalee Sullivan, Mrs. Stella Slikard, Mrs. Elmer Cummins, Mrs. Crider, Miss Betty Crider.

Mrs. Glenda Kelly, Mrs. Elsie James, Miss Suzy King, Mrs. Anna Finney, Mrs. Florence Dovers, Mrs. Norma James, Mrs. Beulah Rodgers, Mrs. R. T. Reed, Mrs. Sandra Scott, Mrs. Joe Roy King.

Mrs. Francis Harrison, Mrs. Laverne Carmack, Mrs. Ralph McFerron, Mrs. Muriel Bryant, Mrs. Judi Keating, Mrs. Irene Yount, Mrs. Maxine Conley, Mrs. Mabel Northcutt, Miss Lois McFerron, Miss Tami James.

Mrs. Loretta Curtner, Mrs. Irene Williams, Mrs. Ann Amerson, Mrs. Mae King, Mrs. Edward Dodge, Miss Sharron Dodge and Mrs. Jewell Watson.

Extension Club Has Meeting

The Vanduser Extension Club met Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. in the community building with seven members and one visitor present. The club was honored by the presence of Mrs. Frank Willard from Key West, Fla., daughter of Lillian Beavers.

After the club collect was read and the minutes given, a committee was selected for telephone service. The committee is composed of Evelyn Hill and Virginia Yandell.

An apron was won by Mrs. Casey. Martha Sue Foster gave the lesson.

Roll call was answered with "the work I like to do."

The 4-H Club lead by Muriel Patterson will attend the next club meeting August 4 to bake cookies for the Vanduser Club. A club picnic will be held August 10 at the City Park in Sikeston.

The club voted to assist the Scott County Extension Club in locating victims of cerebral disease. Hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. Casey and Mrs. Edwards.

SEWS FOR WIFE

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Jack Chambliss is a singer, music educator and a church choir director by profession — but in his spare time, he chooses to make a sewing machine sing.

Chambliss says sewing provides the same kind of pleasure for him as does his woodworking hobby. He makes his wife at least one new outfit each season and sews for his daughter as well.

When Jack and Wilmoth Chambliss were first married, his mother and sister sewed for the bride. Then they moved 1,000 miles away to St. Cloud, Minn., where he served on the faculty of St. Cloud State College. When Mrs. Chambliss needed new clothes, he decided to try his hand at it. His first creation was such a success that he has continued sewing.

NO. 5 CARRIES ON

CLAYTON, N.M. (AP) — Post Office Box No. 51 has been used by members of the same family for the past 77 years. In 1888, Miss Elisa Coigny went to the post office and rented that box after she moved here from Grenville where she'd served as postmistress. She kept the same postal box all during her married life as Mrs. Jack Porter.

When she and her husband died, their daughter, Mrs. Alice Porter Blake, continued renting the box. When a new postal building was built recently, Mrs. Blake made sure she got box No. 51.

NO. 5 CARRIES ON

CLAYTON, N.M. (AP) — Post Office Box No. 51 has been used by members of the same family for the past 77 years. In 1888, Miss Elisa Coigny went to the post office and rented that box after she moved here from Grenville where she'd served as postmistress. She kept the same postal box all during her married life as Mrs. Jack Porter.

When she and her husband died, their daughter, Mrs. Alice Porter Blake, continued renting the box. When a new postal building was built recently, Mrs. Blake made sure she got box No. 51.

Sam Mele Fined $500 And Suspended For Five Days

MINNEAPOLIS —ST. PAUL (AP) — Manager Sam Mele, waiting out a five-day suspension imposed after his altercation Sunday with umpire Bill Valentine, had his ruffled feelings soothed Monday night when his American League-leading Minnesota Twins whipped the Los Angeles Angels 5-2.

"They didn't seem to miss me, did they?" Mele said after viewing the game from Twins' President Calvin Griffith's booth in the Metropolitan Stadium pressbox.

"Maybe I should sit up here all the time."

Mele, who earlier Monday said he felt league President Joe Cronin's punishment of the suspension and a $500 fine was unfair, was in a considerably more jovial mood after the Twins won to protect their 3½-game America League lead.

Coach Hal Naragon directed the Twins from the dugout, and will serve as acting manager until Mele can return to the field at Baltimore Saturday night.

Finest Seats In House Top Redbird Roost

Editor'S Note: Joe Bean and Richard Smith, members of the Daily Standard's editorial department, were press-box guests of the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday.

Perched more than 70 feet above home plate, and commanding a view second to none, the finest seat in Mr. Busch's redbird roost at Dodier and Grant in St. Louis is the press box.

The two-level, 80-seat haven for sportswriters sits on the roof at the southwest corner of Busch Stadium. Toward the right, the near-complete stainless steel arch gleams in the afternoon sun; the centerfield flags are draped at half mast; and in left field, the huge A and the eagle above the scoreboard obscure all but a glimpse of the city beyond the ball park.

Looking almost straight down, we gazed upon the symmetrical beauty of the playing field. With home plate at a center, the park stretches into right and left field with identical facilities on either side of the diamond.

Batting circle, dugout, coach's box, bullpen, and warning track: it looks like the field could be balanced on a needle point.

Open only to authorized members of the press, the lofty seats became ours after showing our tickets four times: once at the press gate window, again at the elevator, then again at the lobby on the fifth "floor" of the ball park, and finally as we walked into the press box itself.

Sitting on the upper tier, we glanced down to the section one step below us. Teletypes and sportswriters chattered away, as the game's play-by-play was relayed to newspapers across the land.

A press lounge behind us served cold drinks and sandwiches, courtesy of the Cardinals.

As novices to the press box, we were unknowns who watched the "old pros" enter and leave, greeting Ed and Emma, the genial pair who run the lounge.

Once fixed in our seats--numbers 25 and 26--we easily had the finest possible view of the game. Peering almost straight down, we watched the pitchers exercise their talents with the curve ball, the slider, and the screwball -- their intricate gyrations were easily visible.

Electric fans kept the air moving, and the official scorer kept the sportswriters posted on baseshits and errors, wild pitches and passed balls.

On our way downstairs after the game, we shared an elevator with former Phillies' great Richie Ashburn, now a baseball announcer.

The press box, in retrospect, lacked only one thing: an abundance of foul balls. One foul found its way into the box, but try as we might, it was too far away.

Fabick Continues To Win Leslie Edged In Close Bout

Strong hitting and fielding led the mighty Fabick in coasting to a 14-12 win over the next-to-last place Police in the American League last night. Police put up a fine battle allowing Fabick no more hits than they captured themselves.

Police began in the lead at the beginning of the bout with 4 runs off 4 hits. They held Fabick scoreless and hitless in that frame. Fabick came back in the second with a run to bring the score to 4-1. Again Police battered Fabick with another run still holding them without action in the third. Fourth frame started the rocks tumbling when Fabick gave the ball a ride with 3 hits and when on in tallying across 8 runs. That brought the score to 9-5 — Fabick in the lead for the first time. In the bottom of the fourth Police banged 2 hits and touched home plate 4 times. Things were all tied up. Fabick took the top position again in the fifth scoring 4 runs and holding Police to 2. Last inning brought a run for both teams.

Allen starting for Fabick was relieved by McRoy who was handed the win. Terrell pitched a fine game but took the loss in the last two frames.

Leslie Insurance received a bump in the second game at Farris Field as they were nicked by fourth place Security Federal with 8-7 as the final score. Leslie's pitcher Wake may have lost the game but he sure pitched a fine game allowing only 2 hits to Security. Leslie tagged the baseball for 5 hits off McConnell's fastball. McConnell was the winning pitcher as Wake gave in to be stuck with the loss.

Security took an early inning lead as they dumped one run across the plate in the first. In the third, Leslie banged 1 hit to produce their 3 runs. Security came storming back in the bottom of that frame with 5 runs. That carried the score to 6-3. Two runs were tallied by Leslie in the fourth and 2 in the last — but not enough to tower over Security. They scored twice in the last to bring the score to 8-7.

Harlow prompted Leslie Insurance's hitting attack as he let 2 go out of the infield for base hits. Beck and McConnell managed the only hits for Security.

Matson Leaves To Join U.S. Team

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) —Randy Matson, world's record holder in the shot put, leaves Thursday for New York to join the American team that competes against Russia at Kiev July 31-Aug. 1.

He is departing earlier than anticipated so he can go by way of Wichita, Kan., where an AAU meet for the American team is being held Friday night. He has hopes of being able to compete in the meet designed to raise funds to send the U.S. team to Russia.

Matson said Senator Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., who has called for an investigation of the NCAA-AAU feud, had sent him the copy of a telegram in which he asked the two organizations to allow Matson to compete at Wichita.

The NCAA had forbidden his participation and Matson had planned to leave July 24 for New York until he learned of the new developments.

"I am going to Wichita with hopes of being able to compete," said Matson. "But I'll attend the meet even if I have to sit in the stands."

Lewis Lashes Legion In National League Contest

Lewis Furniture chalked up another win last night at Puckett Field as they skated to a 6-1 decision over the Legion nine.

The big spotlight of the evening shone down on Lewis' star pitcher and hitter, Schatzley. The little hurler, handed the ball to 19 players--striking out 11, walking 3 and allowing only 1 Legion batter, Britt, to rap the ball for a single in the fourth. He was given full 6 inning credit with the win as he held Shy with the defeat. Not only highlighted was he in the pitching, but also in the slugging. Out of the 5 hits for his team he drove in 2 of them with a home run in the fourth.

Lewis scored twice in the third and fourth and once in the fifth. Legion scrapped up one hit and one run in the fourth.

Game number two for the evening in the National League was surrendered by A & B Oil Co. to Kiwanis with an 8-4 total.

The six-inning bout got under way with action in the second frame when Kiwanis started the scoring on Adams two-bag hit. The fourth inning really saw life as Kiwanis crossed the plate 6 times on 3 hits. A & B managed their first of 4 runs in that frame. Inning 5 brought one extra run to the powerful hitting Kiwanis nine. A & B started a rally on 4 hits and 3 runs but was grounded before any tying or winning runs tallied across.

Out of the 11-hit attack by Kiwanis, Hackney and Adams were responsible for 3 and Hosey for 2. Wilson and Mulcahy led the losers with 2 apiece.

Miller hurled for Kiwanis giving the disappointment to Dodd of A & B.

Eric Sappenfield Pulls Unassisted Triple Play

In a Musial League bout last Thursday between Rotary and Odd Fellows a rare happening occurred -- an unassisted triple play. The stunt man that hauled off the rarely seen performance was Rotary's on-the-ball third baseman, Eric Sappenfield. Anyone that is able to time the play so perfectly as did Eric, must have been "on the ball."

It all happened in the third inning when Odd Fellows were trying to break the 9-9 tie. In that spectacular and terrible inning Odd Fellow's Farris took a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Murphy also walked. Fausett came to bat to let loose a single to load the bases with no outs -- Farris on third, Murphy on second, and Fausett on first. Harbin walked to the plate and let one of La Plant's fastballs loose for a thought sure single over third base. Thought -- yes, but Eric wasn't about to let Odd Fellows score any more runs, and snagged the linedrive to put up the first out. Seeing the runners thinking the ball long gone and advancing, he stepped on third forcing Farris out and went on to triple everything up as he tagged Murphy on his way to third.

The inning was over, but not for Eric as he will long remember a tied ballgame -- with bases loaded, no outs, and then all of a sudden 1-2-3, it's all over.

Rotary won the game with a final score of 14-10.

Kansas City stopped the White Sox 6-3 at Chicago Monday night while the Philadelphia Phillies dropped St. Louis, 5-2, to end a Cardinal winning streak at four.

The Cardinals got one run in the sixth with the help of a collision between two Philadelphia outfielders. Bill White walked with two out in the inning and Mike Shannon bashed the ball to left-center. Alex Johnson appeared to have caught the ball at the wall when he collided with Johnny Briggs. The ball rolled away as White scored and Shannon went into third with a triple.

Ray Washburn took the loss for the Cards. It was his seventh defeat against five victories. The winner was Chris Short.

Kansas City shut out the White Sox over the first six innings behind two-hit pitching of Rollie Sheldon.

In the seventh, the A's scored all of their runs on a single, an error, another single, a bunt sacrifice, a squeeze bunt, a stolen base and Dick Green's three-run homer.

The White Sox scored twice in their half of the seventh on two singles, a walk, another single and another walk that forced in the second run. Chicago picked up one more in the ninth on a walk, a single, and a foul-fly out.

Sheldon received credit for the victory although he needed help from Jim Dickson, Don Mossi and Wes Stock.

Kansas City is idle today while the Cards again host the Phillies. Curt Simmons will start for St. Louis against Jim Bunning.

harmful contaminants
(so they can't block your gas line!)

What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER blocks out contaminants right at the pump nozzle. If you use your car on the job (and even if you don't) you stay out of trouble when you "fill 'er up filtered" with American Regular or American Super-Premium.

Sam Mele Fined $500 And Suspended For Five Days

MINNEAPOLIS — ST. PAUL (AP) — Manager Sam Mele, waiting out a five-day suspension imposed after his altercation Sunday with umpire Bill Valentine, had his ruffled feelings soothed Monday night when his American League-leading Minnesota Twins whipped the Los Angeles Angels 5-2.

"They didn't seem to miss me, did they?" Mele said after viewing the game from Twins' President Calvin Griffith's booth in the Metropolitan Stadium pressbox.

"Maybe I should sit up here all the time."

Mele, who earlier Monday said he felt league President Joe Cronin's punishment of the suspension and a $500 fine was unfair, was in a considerably more jovial mood after the Twins won to protect their 3½-game America League lead.

Coach Hal Naragon directed the Twins from the dugout, and will serve as acting manager until Mele can return to the field at Baltimore Saturday night.

Finest Seats In House Top Redbird Roost

Editor'S Note: Joe Bean and Richard Smith, members of the Daily Standard's editorial department, were press-box guests of the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday.

Perched more than 70 feet above home plate, and commanding a view second to none, the finest seat in Mr. Busch's redbird roost at Dodier and Grant in St. Louis is the press box.

The two-level, 80-seat haven for sportswriters sits on the roof at the southwest corner of Busch Stadium. Toward the right, the near-complete stainless steel arch gleams in the afternoon sun; the centerfield flags are draped at half mast; and in left field, the huge A and the eagle above the scoreboard obscure all but a glimpse of the city beyond the ball park.

Looking almost straight down, we gazed upon the symmetrical beauty of the playing field. With home plate at a center, the park stretches into right and left field with identical facilities on either side of the diamond.

Batting circle, dugout, coach's box, bullpen, and warning track: it looks like the field could be balanced on a needle point.

Open only to authorized members of the press, the lofty seats became ours after showing our tickets four times: once at the press gate window, again at the elevator, then again at the lobby on the fifth "floor" of the ball park, and finally as we walked into the press box itself.

Sitting on the upper tier, we glanced down to the section one step below us. Teletypes and sportswriters chattered away, as the game's play-by-play was relayed to newspapers across the land.

A press lounge behind us served cold drinks and sandwiches, courtesy of the Cardinals.

As novices to the press box, we were unknowns who watched the "old pros" enter and leave, greeting Ed and Emma, the genial pair who run the lounge.

Once fixed in our seats--numbers 25 and 26--we easily had the finest possible view of the game. Peering almost straight down, we watched the pitchers exercise their talents with the curve ball, the slider, and the screwball -- their intricate gyrations were easily visible.

Electric fans kept the air moving, and the official scorer kept the sportswriters posted on baseahits and errors, wild pitches and passed balls.

On our way downstairs after the game, we shared an elevator with former Phillies' great Richie Ashburn, now a baseball announcer.

The press box, in retrospect, lacked only one thing: an abundance of foul balls. One foul found its way into the box, but try as we might, it was too far away.

Fabick Continues To Win Leslie Edged In Close Bout

Strong hitting and fielding led the mighty Fabick in coasting to a 14-12 win over the next-to-last place Police in the American League last night. Police put up a fine battle allowing Fabick no more hits than they captured themselves.

Police began in the lead at the beginning of the bout with 4 runs off 4 hits. They held Fabick scoreless and hitless in that frame. Fabick came back in the second with a run to bring the score to 4-1. Again Police battered Fabick with another run still holding them without action in the third. Fourth frame started the rocks tumbling when Fabick gave the ball a ride with 3 hits and when on in tallying across 8 runs. That brought the score to 9-5 — Fabick in the lead for the first time. In the bottom of the fourth Police banged 2 hits and touched home plate 4 times. Things were all tied up. Fabick took the top position again in the fifth scoring 4 runs and holding Police to 2. Last inning brought a run for both teams.

Allen starting for Fabick was relieved by McRoy who was handed the win. Terrell pitched a fine game but took the loss in the last two frames.

Leslie Insurance received a bump in the second game at Farris Field as they were nicked by fourth place Security Federal with 8-7 as the final score. Leslie's pitcher Wake may have lost the game but he sure pitched a fine game allowing only 2 hits to Security. Leslie tagged the baseball for 5 hits off McConnell's fastball. McConnell was the winning pitcher as Wake gave in to be stuck with the loss.

Security took an early inning lead as they dumped one run across the plate in the first. In the third, Leslie banged 1 hit to produce their 3 runs. Security came storming back in the bottom of that frame with 5 runs. That carried the score to 6-3. Two runs were tallied by Leslie in the fourth and 2 in the last — but not enough to tower over Security. They scored twice in the last to bring the score to 8-7.

Harlow prompted Leslie Insurance's hitting attack as he let 2 go out of the infield for base hits. Beck and McConnell managed the only hits for Security.

Lewis Lashes Legion In National League Contest

Lewis Furniture chalked up another win last night at Puckett Field as they skated to a 6-1 decision over the Legion nine.

The big spotlight of the evening shone down on Lewis' star pitcher and hitter, Schatzley. The little hurler, handed the ball to 19 players--striking out 11, walking 3 and allowing only 1 Legion batter, Britt, to rap the ball for a single in the fourth. He was given full 6 inning credit with the win as he held Shy with the defeat. Not only highlighted was he in the pitching, but also in the slugging. Out of the 5 hits for his team he drove in 2 of them with a home run in the fourth.

Lewis scored twice in the third and fourth and once in the fifth. Legion scrapped up one hit and one run in the fourth.

Game number two for the evening in the National League was surrendered by A & B Oil Co. to Kiwanis with an 8-4 total.

The six-inning bout got under way with action in the second frame when Kiwanis started the scoring on Adams two-bag hit. The fourth inning really saw life as Kiwanis crossed the plate 6 times on 3 hits. A & B managed their first of 4 runs in that frame. Inning 5 brought one extra run to the powerful hitting Kiwanis nine. A & B started a rally on 4 hits and 3 runs but was grounded before any tying or winning runs tallied across.

Out of the 11-hit attack by Kiwanis, Hackney and Adams were responsible for 3 and Hosey for 2. Wilson and Mulcahy led the losers with 2 apiece.

Matson Leaves To Join U.S. Team

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) —Randy Matson, world's record holder in the shot put, leaves Thursday for New York to join the American team that competes against Russia at Kiev July 31-Aug. 1.

He is departing earlier than anticipated so he can go by way of Wichita, Kan., where an AAU meet for the American team is being held Friday night. He has hopes of being able to compete in the meet designed to raise funds to send the U.S. team to Russia.

Matson said Senator Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., who has called for an investigation of the NCAA-AAU feud, had sent him the copy of a telegram in which he asked the two organizations to allow Matson to compete at Wichita.

The NCAA had forbidden his participation and Matson had planned to leave July 24 for New York until he learned of the new developments.

"I am going to Wichita with hopes of being able to compete," said Matson. "But I'll attend the meet even if I have to sit in the stands."

Phillies Muffed Cards Streak In 5-2 Triumph

Kansas City stopped the White Sox 6-3 at Chicago Monday night while the Philadelphia Phillies dropped St. Louis, 5-2, to end a Cardinal winning streak at four.

The Cardinals got one run in the sixth with the help of a collision between two Philadelphia outfielders. Bill White walked with two out in the inning and Mike Shannon bashed the ball to left-center. Alex Johnson appeared to have caught the ball at the wall when he collided with Johnny Briggs. The ball rolled away as White scored and Shannon went into third with a triple.

Ray Washburn took the loss for the Cards. It was his seventh defeat against five victories. The winner was Chris Short.

Kansas City shut out the White Sox over the first six innings behind two-hit pitching of Rollie Sheldon.

In the seventh, the A's scored all of their runs on a single, an error, another single, a bunt sacrifice, a squeeze bunt, a stolen base and Dick Green's three-run homer.

The White Sox scored twice in their half of the seventh on two singles, a walk, another single and another walk that forced in the second run. Chicago picked up one more in the ninth on a walk, a single, and a foul-fly out.

Sheldon received credit for the victory although he needed help from Jim Dickson, Don Mossi and Wes Stock.

Eric Sappenfield Pulls Unassisted Triple Play

In a Musial League bout last Thursday between Rotary and Odd Fellows a rare happening occurred -- an unassisted triple play. The stunt man that hauled off the rarely seen performance was Rotary's on-the-ball third baseman, Eric Sappenfield. Anyone that is able to time the play so perfectly as did Eric, must have been "on the ball."

It all happened in the third inning when Odd Fellows were trying to break the 9-9 tie. In that spectacular and terrible inning Odd Fellow's Farris took a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Murphy also walked. Fausett came to bat to let loose a single to load the bases with no outs -- Farris on third, Murphy on second, and Fausett on first. Harbin walked to the plate and let one of La Plant's fastballs loose for a thought sure single over third base. Thought -- yes, but Eric wasn't about to let Odd Fellows score any more runs, and snagged the linedrive to put up the first out. Seeing the runners thinking the ball long gone and advancing, he stepped on third forcing Farris out and went on to triple everything up as he tagged Murphy on his way to third.

The inning was over, but not for Eric as he will long remember a tied ballgame -- with bases loaded, no outs, and then all of a sudden 1-2-3, it's all over.

Rotary won the game with a final score of 14-10.

What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER blocks out contaminants right at the pump nozzle. ## Charleston Guards Leave for Ripley

CHARLESTON -- Four officers and 53 enlisted men of Charleston's Company C, 1st Battalion, 140th Infantry left at 4 a.m. Friday for their annaul two - week summer encampment at Camp Ripley, Minn.

The company assembled at the armory at 1;30 a.m., and left in motor convoy, passing the Home Oil Co. at 4 a.m.

An advance party composed of Staff Sergeants Buford Sutherland and Joseph T. Glenn left earlier this week to prepare the company area at Camp Ripley.

The company will return to Charleston on Aug. 1.

Rusk Wants to Be Anonymous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Can you remember anything Secretary of State Dean Rusk ever said except for that "eyeball to eyeball" bit about the Cuban missile crisis?

Probably not. And that in itself is one of the best commentaries on how he runs his job. He is one of the most anonymous secretaries of state this country ever had. He wants it that way.

Nevertheless, for a man who says so little memorable or controversial, it's odd how rumors keep popping up that President Johnson, who inherited him from President John F. Kennedy, is going to replace him.

There was one after Johnson won the presidency on his own in the 1964 election. There were rumors after that. There was one last week. There was another, coming out of Congress, Monday.

This one has Johnson appointing Rusk U.S. ambassador to the United Nations to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson, but if Johnson has any such thought he put himself in an awkward position to do anything about it.

Last week, the day before Stevenson died, Johnson was asked about the rumor going around then that he planned to get rid of Rusk. The President told the questioner:

"I think you do a great damage and a great disservice to one of the most able and most competent and most dedicated men I have ever known, Secretary Rusk. He sits to my right in the Cabinet room. He ranks first in Cabinet and he ranks first with me."

On the face of it that would seem the best piece of job insurance Rusk could get. Monday's rumor had Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara succeeding Rusk if Rusk took Stevenson's place.

But Johnson seems immensely pleased with both men in the jobs they have. Only three weeks after taking office in 1963 Johnson said of McNamara:

This country never had an "abler or more dedicated secretary of defense and I have known them all." At another time Johnson said McNamara "represents the very best in America."

Since Rusk and McNamara get along, there's no apparent rivalry or bickering between them but there is a difference.

McNamara, highly aggressive, has antagonized some members of Congress, especially in wanting to save money by shutting down government installations in some congressional districts.

His self-assurance irks some people, too. He says that when Kennedy gave him the defense job he chose an "active role providing aggressive leadership" and it "represents my own philosophy of management."

He is an acknowledged whiz on facts, figures and managing the whole defense set-up. It's a lot more difficult to make an appraisal of Rusk. Highly intelligent, amazingly self-effacing, he almost always says the usual.

His best-remembered statement came in talking about the head-on American-Russian showdown over Cuban missiles in 1962. Rusk said the two countries were "eyeball to eyeball and I think the other fellow blinked."

Rusk, unlike McNamara, avoids public clashes almost totally. Therefore, since he is obvious and usual in public, his great value to Johnson must come in his contributions behind closed doors.

One thing is sure: he's calm and he is a master in his field of foreign affairs, which means he's an expert technician. This would seem to make him to order for Johnson and Kennedy.

Both insisted on doing the talking on big problems. Thus Rusk is a switch from his two most famous precedessors of the past 15 years: Secretaries of State Dean Acheson and John Foster Dulles.

Both were always in hot water from talking.

Commission Opposes LBJ Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Highway Commission has told the state's congressional delegation it opposes four pending Johnson administration bills as too costly and too detrimental to the highway program.

In letters to Missouri congressmen and senators, made public today, the commission said the proposals if enacted would cost an estimated $50 to $60 million in the next five years.

"We are sure our citizens want more and better roads," the letter said. "It is most evident to us any reduction in funds, especially a mandatory one, will be detrimental to Missouri's highway program.

"No one quarrels with the administration's views on billboard control or landscaping and roadside development. However, we cannot comply with the advertising control features and the relocation of junkyards through police powers. The rights of the billboards and junkyards will have to be purchased."

Bills to ban billboards along interstate routes and to force the removal of junkyards from near highway rights of way were introduced in the 1965 legislature. Both measures failed.

The letter said the commission is not opposed to landscaping and beautification of highway rights of way but the cost would take too much from the road building program.

It also opposed a fourth proposal "making it mandatory that one-third of the secondary funds be used for construction of scenic roads and roads leading to recreational areas.

"In Missouri we have about 23,000 miles in our secondary system. we have a long range improvement program for this system. If the funds are reduced by one-third, as proposed, our program must be reduced accordingly."

Move toward Plant Bonds

DEXTER -- Further legal steps toward the voting soon of industrial bonds for the expansion of the Elder factory were taken this week by city officials and officers of the Chamber of Commerce.

It now appears probable that the vote on the bonds will come sometime in August. The bonds will be for $85,000 -- to be retired by rental by the Elder firm. There will be no increase in taxes as a result of the bonds, it was emphasized.

This week, legal papers were received by the Chamber of Commerce, after a trip to St. Louis by W. L. Arnold, Chamber of Commerce secretary. These were approved and signed this week by Mayor Melvin Gainer and members of the City Council, and are now being processed again -- another of the lengthy legal steps necessary in such a bond program.

Meanwhile, plans are being made to start work on the project as quickly as possible. The plan calls for the construction of a large addition to the Elder plant here, which will expand the company's operations here and permit the hiring of additional employees.

C of C leaders said that Elder officials were anxious to have the project completed as quickly as possible.

Aviation Day Aug. 15 at Kennett Port

KENNETT -- The Kennett Aero club has announced plans for its second annual Aviation Day Fly-in, which will be held Aug. 15 at the Kennett Municipal Airport.

The club met to set up committees and begin the ground work for the upcoming event.

Plans are now being made to accommodate more than 1,000 persons. Some 700 persons were given rides in planes, piloted by members of the club, last year.

Refreshments will be available and various forms of aerial entertainment are being planned. A number of prizes will be given, including the youngest and oldest passengers and oldest antique plane.

Pilots are expected to fly-in to the event from throughout the Mid-South.

Operations of Plant Related

DEXTER -- The large and extensive operations of the IXL Handle Manufacturing Company in this area, including Bernie and Dexter, were described to members of the Chamber of Commerce by Charles W. Gary, sales representative for the firm which is headed by E. L. Keathley of Dexter.

The IXL firm is one of the largest employers in this area, and turns out tool handles and other wood products, including furniture legs, which are sold throughout the world.

Gary traced briefly the history of the firm, which is one of the oldest such manufacturing companies in the country in continuous operation. In addition, during the past few years Mr. Keathley has purchased other such manufacturing concerns in Southeast Missouri, thus enlarging his operations in the area.

The firm has a large warehouse facility in Dexter and there are plans being made to enlarge the facilities here in the future, Gary said.

IXL produces all types of tool handles, for both agricultural tools and striking tools. In addition thousands of legs for furniture are produced for furniture manufacturers all over the world.

Main problem today for the firm, Gary explained, was the securing of sufficient quantities of the proper quality of wood.

Watch For Rally

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK -- One of Wall Street's cherished traditions is the summer rally. And this year even those who scoff at such things are watching the market closely for a sign of a sustained rally.

Some brokers are hoping that the market's recent steadying has made a foundation on which a measureable rally can be built.

In their view the sharp break at the end of June was the climax of the long slide from the stock price highs reached May 14. These brokers term the rebound from that climax a technical reaction to overselling and not a dyed-in-the-wool summer rally.

And they see the lazy trading and minor price variations of last week as a sign that the market at last may be immune to much of the nervousness which triggered the declines of last month and late May.

Like many of Wall Street's traditions there is nothing sure about a summer rally.

Sometimes it is absent or so minor and short an event as scarcely to merit that description. Sometimes it comes early in the summer. Usually it is tied to some news event that has little seasonal coloring. And sometimes the rally has been so late that the traditionalists have been hard put to defend it as a summer rather than an early fall rally.

Often any little rebound, however technical and short lived, is termed a summer rally just to get that tradition neatly sewed up and out of the way.

This year one is awaited with more than usual anticipation. That is because of all the uncertainties that caused the May-June breaks and that still persist.

Viet Nam is the biggest question mark. But some brokers say that most traders have discounted the buildup in the war there. Many who sold nervously in May and June foresaw the trend to greater involvement of U. S. men and money in that war.

Business uncertainties also have plagued the market. Many stock traders have taken to the sidelines after lightening their portfolios and are waiting to see how the 53-month-old business upswing survives a summer slowdown and fares next fall.

A rally would please business because it would tend to bolster public confidence -- and good business is built on that. The Johnson administration would be pleased as a sign that nervousness over the effectiveness of its fiscal policies had been overcome.

Cape Hopes for Training Center

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO. -- December has been set tentatively as the date for awarding a general contract for construction of a Naval Reserve training center in Cape Girardeau.

The building, to cost between $300,000 and $500,000 will be erected on a five-acre tract optioned by the city for $50,000.

H. L. Jordan, project manager of the Midwest Division, Bureau of Yards and Docks, Great Lakes, Ill., said present plans call for bid advertisement about Nov. 15, with the contract award a month later.

The city expects to exercise the option on the land and will lease the tract to the Navy at $1 per year.

The Navy now operates a reserve training center at Municipal Airport, leased from the city. Two units, a surface division and a Seabee company train there. Combined strength runs between 225 and 250 men.

Canalou Club To Attend Fair

CANALOU -- The Thursday 4-H meeting was spent in making plans for the County 4-H Fair Thursday and Friday at New Madrid.

The club planned a number of exhibits and demonstrations. They will also participate in the "Share The Fun" numbers and enter the "Good Grooming" contest.

Demonstrations were given at this meeting by Harold Molloy on "How To Polish Shoes," Teressa Molloy on the "Proper Way to Brush Your Hair," and Ruth Lumsden demonstrated exercizes.

Mrs. Charles McCann and Mrs. Willard Cude, guests at this meeting served as judges and selected Nancy Cain and Sidney Fraley to represent the club at the fair. Ruth Ann Lumsden and Mike Geske were chosen as alternates.

Four Injured in Portageville Crash

PORTAGEVILLE -- Four young women were injured in the collision of two cars at a street intersection in Portageville Thursday afternoon.

According to the Highway Patrol investigation report, Karolyn Thompson, 19, of New Madrid, was driving east at 3:30 p.m. in a 1963 Pontiac. As she approached the street intersection she claims her vision was obstructed. She did not see any traffic and pulled out into the path of a southbound 1962 Ford driven by Joy Stewart, 25, of Point Pleasant.

In the collision of the two vehicles both drivers and two passengers in the Thompson car were injured. Karolyn Thompson received scrapes on the left side of her body and a nose injury. Carla Bell, 18, and Gwen Allen, 16, both of Lilbourn, suffered head and face injuries. Joy Stewart had a major cut on her face and lip and an injury to her left leg. All were taken to the Grable Clinic at Portageville for treatment.

Reject Bid for Signal Change

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Highway Commission said today it has approved $2,823,620 in bids for highway improvements.

It rejected as too high a bid for traffic signal modification on U. S. 67 in Poplar Bluff. The commission said they would be re-advertised for bids.

Charleston Guards Leave for Ripley

CHARLESTON -- Four officers and 53 enlisted men of Charleston's Company C, 1st Battalion, 140th Infantry left at 4 a.m. Friday for their annaul two - week summer encampment at Camp Ripley, Minn.

The company assembled at the armory at 1:30 a.m., and left in motor convoy, passing the Home Oil Co. at 4 a.m.

An advance party composed of Staff Sergeants Buford Sutherland and Joseph T. Glenn left earlier this week to prepare the company area at Camp Ripley.

The company will return to Charleston on Aug. 1.

Rusk Wants to Be Anonymous

WASHINGTON (AP) — Can you remember anything Secretary of State Dean Rusk ever said except for that "eyeball to eyeball" bit about the Cuban missile crisis?

Probably not. And that in itself is one of the best commentaries on how he runs his job. He is one of the most anonymous secretaries of state this country ever had. He wants it that way.

Nevertheless, for a man who says so little memorable or controversial, it's odd how rumors keep popping up that President Johnson, who inherited him from President John F. Kennedy, is going to replace him.

There was one after Johnson won the presidency on his own in the 1964 election. There were rumors after that. There was one last week. There was another, coming out of Congress, Monday.

This one has Johnson appointing Rusk U.S. ambassador to the United Nations to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson. but if Johnson has any such thought he put himself in an awkward position to do anything about it.

Last week, the day before Stevenson died, Johnson was asked about the rumor going around then that he planned to get rid of Rusk. The President told the questioner:

"I think you do a great damage and a great disservice to one of the most able and most competent and most dedicated men I have ever known, Secretary Rusk. He sits to my right in the Cabinet room. He ranks first in Cabinet and he ranks first with me."

On the face of it that would seem the best piece of job insurance Rusk could get. Monday's rumor had Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara succeeding Rusk if Rusk took Stevenson's place.

But Johnson seems immensely pleased with both men in the jobs they have. Only three weeks after taking office in 1963 Johnson said of McNamara:

This country never had an "abler or more dedicated secretary of defense and I have known them all." At another time Johnson said McNamara "represents the very best in America."

Since Rusk and McNamara get along, there's no apparent rivalry or bickering between them but there is a difference.

McNamara, highly aggressive, has antagonized some members of Congress, especially in wanting to save money by shutting down government installations in some congressional districts.

His self-assurance irks some people, too. He says that when Kennedy gave him the defense job he chose an "active role providing aggressive leadership" and it "represents my own philosophy of management."

He is an acknowledged whiz on facts, figures and managing the whole defense set-up. It's a lot more difficult to make an appraisal of Rusk. Highly intelligent, amazingly self-effacing, he almost always says the usual.

His best-remembered statement came in talking about the head-on American-Russian showdown over Cuban missiles in 1962. Rusk said the two countries were "eyeball to eyeball and I think the other fellow blinked."

Rusk, unlike McNamara, avoids public clashes almost totally. Therefore, since he is obvious and usual in public, his great value to Johnson must come in his contributions behind closed doors.

One thing is sure: he's calm and he is a master in his field of foreign affairs, which means he's an expert technician. This would seem to make him to order for Johnson and Kennedy.

Both insisted on doing the talking on big problems. Thus Rusk is a switch from his two most famous precedessors of the past 15 years: Secretaries of State Dean Acheson and John Foster Dulles.

Both were always in hot water from talking.

Commission Opposes LBJ Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Highway Commission has told the state's congressional delegation it opposes four pending Johnson administration bills as too costly and too detrimental to the highway program.

In letters to Missouri congressmen and senators, made public today, the commission said the proposals if enacted would cost an estimated $50 to $60 million in the next five years.

"We are sure our citizens want more and better roads," the letter said. "It is most evident to us any reduction in funds, especially a mandatory one, will be detrimental to Missouri's highway program.

"No one quarrels with the administration's views on billboard control or landscaping and roadside development. However, we cannot comply with the advertising control features and the relocation of junkyards through police powers. The rights of the billboards and junkyards will have to be purchased."

Bills to ban billboards along interstate routes and to force the removal of junkyards from near highway rights of way were introduced in the 1965 legislature. Both measures failed.

The letter said the commission is not opposed to landscaping and beautification of highway rights of way but the cost would take too much from the road building program.

It also opposed a fourth proposal "making it mandatory that one-third of the secondary funds be used for construction of scenic roads and roads leading to recreational areas.

"In Missouri we have about 23,000 miles in our secondary system. we have a long range improvement program for this system. If the funds are reduced by one-third, as proposed, our program must be reduced accordingly."

Aviation Day Aug. 15 at Kennett Port

KENNETT -- The Kennett Aero club has announced plans for its second annual Aviation Day Fly-in, which will be held Aug. 15 at the Kennett Municipal Airport.

The club met to set up committees and begin the ground work for the upcoming event.

Plans are now being made to accommodate more than 1,000 persons. Some 700 persons were given rides in planes, piloted by members of the club, last year.

Refreshments will be available and various forms of aerial entertainment are being planned. A number of prizes will be given, including the youngest and oldest passengers and oldest antique plane.

Pilots are expected to fly-in to the event from throughout the Mid-South.

Operations of Plant Related

DEXTER -- The large and extensive operations of the IXL Handle Manufacturing Company in this area, including Bernie and Dexter, were described to members of the Chamber of Commerce by Charles W. Gary, sales representative for the firm which is headed by E. L. Keathley of Dexter.

The IXL firm is one of the largest employers in this area, and turns out tool handles and other wood products, including furniture legs, which are sold throughout the world.

Gary traced briefly the history of the firm, which is one of the oldest such manufacturing companies in the country in continuous operation. In addition, during the past few years Mr. Keathley has purchased other such manufacturing concerns in Southeast Missouri, thus enlarging his operations in the area.

The firm has a large warehouse facility in Dexter and there are plans being made to enlarge the facilities here in the future, Gary said.

IXL produces all types of tool handles, for both agricultural tools and striking tools. In addition thousands of legs for furniture are produced for furniture manufacturers all over the world.

Main problem today for the firm, Gary explained, was the securing of sufficient quantities of the proper quality of wood.

Move toward Plant Bonds

DEXTER -- Further legal steps toward the voting soon of industrial bonds for the expansion of the Elder factory were taken this week by city officials and officers of the Chamber of Commerce.

It now appears probable that the vote on the bonds will come sometime in August. The bonds will be for $85,000 -- to be retired by rental by the Elder firm. There will be no increase in taxes as a result of the bonds, it was emphasized.

This week, legal papers were received by the Chamber of Commerce, after a trip to St. Louis by W. L. Arnold, Chamber of Commerce secretary. These were approved and signed this week by Mayor Melvin Gainer and members of the City Council, and are now being processed again -- another of the lengthy legal steps necessary in such a bond program.

Meanwhile, plans are being made to start work on the project as quickly as possible. The plan calls for the construction of a large addition to the Elder plant here, which will expand the company's operations here and permit the hiring of additional employees.

C of C leaders said that Elder officials were anxious to have the project completed as quickly as possible.

Watch For Rally

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK -- One of Wall Street's cherished traditions is the summer rally. And this year even those who scoff at such things are watching the market closely for a sign of a sustained rally.

Some brokers are hoping that the market's recent steadying has made a foundation on which a measureable rally can be built.

In their view the sharp break at the end of June was the climax of the long slide from the stock price highs reached May 14. These brokers term the rebound from that climax a technical reaction to overselling and not a dyed-in-the-wool summer rally.

And they see the lazy trading and minor price variations of last week as a sign that the market at last may be immune to much of the nervousness which triggered the declines of last month and late May.

Like many of Wall Street's traditions there is nothing sure about a summer rally.

Sometimes it is absent or so minor and short an event as scarcely to merit that description. Sometimes it comes early in the summer. Usually it is tied to some news event that has little seasonal coloring. And sometimes the rally has been so late that the traditionalists have been hard put to defend it as a summer rather than an early fall rally.

Often any little rebound, however technical and short lived, is termed a summer rally just to get that tradition neatly sewed up and out of the way.

This year one is awaited with more than usual anticipation. That is because of all the uncertainties that caused the May-June breaks and that still persist.

Viet Nam is the biggest question mark. But some brokers say that most traders have discounted the buildup in the war there. Many who sold nervously in May and June foresaw the trend to greater involvement of U. S. men and money in that war.

Business uncertainties also have plagued the market. Many stock traders have taken to the sidelines after lightening their portfolios and are waiting to see how the 53-month-old business upswing survives a summer slowdown and fares next fall.

A rally would please business because it would tend to bolster public confidence -- and good business is built on that. The Johnson administration would be pleased as a sign that nervousness over the effectiveness of its fiscal policies had been overcome.

Cape Hopes for Training Center

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO. -- December has been set tentatively as the date for awarding a general contract for construction of a Naval Reserve training center in Cape Girardeau.

The building, to cost between $300,000 and $500,000 will be erected on a five-acre tract optioned by the city for $50,000.

H. L. Jordan, project manager of the Midwest Division, Bureau of Yards and Docks, Great Lakes, Ill., said present plans call for bid advertisement about Nov. 15, with the contract award a month later.

The city expects to exercise the option on the land and will lease the tract to the Navy at $1 per year.

The Navy now operates a reserve training center at Municipal Airport, leased from the city. Two units, a surface division and a Seabee company train there. Combined strength runs between 225 and 250 men.

Canalou Club To Attend Fair

CANALOU -- The Thursday 4-H meeting was spent in making plans for the County 4-H Fair Thursday and Friday at New Madrid.

The club planned a number of exhibits and demonstrations. They will also participate in the "Share The Fun" numbers and enter the "Good Grooming" contest.

Demonstrations were given at this meeting by Harold Molloy on "How To Polish Shoes," Teressa Molloy on the "Proper Way to Brush Your Hair," and Ruth Lumsden demonstrated exercizes.

Mrs. Charles McCann and Mrs. Willard Cude, guests at this meeting served as judges and selected Nancy Cain and Sidney Fraley to represent the club at the fair. Ruth Ann Lumsden and Mike Geske were chosen as alternates.

Four Injured in Portageville Crash

PORTAGEVILLE -- Four young women were injured in the collision of two cars at a street intersection in Portageville Thursday afternoon.

According to the Highway Patrol investigation report, Karolyn Thompson, 19, of New Madrid, was driving east at 3:30 p.m. in a 1963 Pontiac. As she approached the street intersection she claims her vision was obstructed. She did not see any traffic and pulled out into the path of a southbound 1962 Ford driven by Joy Stewart, 25, of Point Pleasant.

In the collision of the two vehicles both drivers and two passengers in the Thompson car were injured. Karolyn Thompson received scrapes on the left side of her body and a nose injury. Carla Bell, 18, and Gwen Allen, 16, both of Lilbourn, suffered head and face injuries. Joy Stewart had a major cut on her face and lip and an injury to her left leg. All were taken to the Grable Clinic at Portageville for treatment.

Reject Bid for Signal Change

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The Highway Commission said today it has approved $2,823,620 in bids for highway improvements.

It rejected as too high a bid for traffic signal modification on U. S. 67 in Poplar Bluff. The commission said they would be re-advertised for bids.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 years ago
July 20, 1915

While guests of Dr. Grinstead at Cairo, Monday night, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Yount were visited by the stork who left them a very fine son. The youngster was named John Henry, jr., and since the occasion the senior Yount wears a broad smile and speaks very proudly of what he and his son, John, propose to do on that big alfalfa farm.

Mrs. Chas. Yanson and daughter, Nell, left Saturday for a visit with her mother, Mrs. A. W. Edminston in Kennett.

Supt. R. V. Ellise of the local public school system this morning announced the selection of M. L. Grannemann of New Haven, Mo., as instructor of English at the Sikeston High School for the coming year.

At a wedding ceremony marked by simplicity, Miss Eva Hess, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Hess of this city, and Thomas C. Reed of Sparks, Nev., were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the Hess home on Park avenue.

Miss Honora Bailey entertained at luncheon last Thursday noon in honor of her guest, Mrs. Gladys Stewart of Springfield.

The following enjoyed a splash party at Dexter Monday evening: Misses Lillian and Lucille Kendall, Clara Lindley, Ruth Allard, Honora Bailey, Dorothy Miller, Helen Kready, Mrs. Gladys Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bailey, Messrs. Charlie and Harold Hebbeler, Byron Crain and Cecil Jones.

W. A. Martin, a former resident of Sikeston and Charleston, died Wednesday morning at his home in St. Louis.

Rain, accompanied by a severe windstorm Sunday evening, totaled 1.20 inches, filling streets with water.

Billy Johnson, seven-year-old son of Illah Johnson of Morley, died Thursday in St. Francis Hospital at Cape Girardeau, of injuries which he suffered when he was struck Wednesday by an automobile on Highway 61 a mile south of Morley.

Orville Lumsden of Sikeston stood first in a list of ranking Southeast Missouri golf league tournament players made public last week. Lumsden's average was 71 4/5 for the five games he participated in.

The Sikeston Legion Junior baseball team, already champions of the district, continued their winning streak in their last game of the season Sunday, defeating the Jackson nine in a game on the Jackson diamond. But it took the Sikeston boys 10 innings to do it. The final score was 3 to 2.

Two new teachers have been selected to fill the vacancies in the faculty of the Sikeston public schools, it is announced by the superintendent, Tharon Stallings, this week. E. Dean Owen, son of the Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Owen of Sikeston, will teach industrial arts and junior high school science at Sikeston High School. The other new teacher is Miss Alma Mercer of Oran, who will teach in the South Grade School.

The Sikeston Legion Junior baseball team, district champions, will go to St. Louis next Tuesday to take part in state contests.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

TUESDAY, JULY 20, 1965

Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it. (Revelation 3:8)

PRAYER: Help us, O Father, to be deeply sensitive to the needs of others about us. Help us to see the opportunities these very needs bring us for helpful service. We ask in the name of Christ, who said, "I am the door of the sheep." Amen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that whenever a couple is divorced, if the husband gets the children it is assumed that:

(1) He caught her under the worst possible circumstances or

(2) She is a tramp who didn't want to be bothered with the children or

(3) She is mentally unstable and/or an alcholic.

I would like to dispel these notions once and for all, and I am well qualified to do so since I'm a divorcee who is not a tramp, was not caught, nor am I incompetent or alcoholic. I gave up my children simply because I felt they would be better off with their father.

My husband and I never got along. I married him to please a socially ambitious mother. The children adore their father. They tolerate me. They think I am weak, insecure and addlebrained. They think their father is strong, brilliant and capable. I have never been able to control them. Whatever their father says is gospel.

When we split up several months ago my husband said, "Shall we ask the children with whom they want to live?" (They are 15, 13 and 12.) I replied, "No, I couldn't bear the humiliation of having them choose. Let's tell them they will live with their father." That settled it and I'm sure they were relieved.

So, here's a different kind of letter for your column, Ann Landers. Label it "Education." Sincerely yours. -- ODD WOMAN OUT

Dear Woman: You do not sound weak, insecure or addlebrained to me, but you have sadly underestimated yourself. Good luck in making a new life -- and thanks for the "education."

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing because my 14-year-old niece asked me to. I don't know the answer but I'm hoping you will.

My niece is a very sweet person and has many friends, both girls and boys. They are allowed to come to the house to sing, dance, play records and just visit, which I think is perfectly fine. The problem is the girl's mother.

She's in her middle 30's and has five children. The woman wears a bikini from the first day of spring until snow hits the ground. She knows she has an outstanding figure and apparently she wants everyone else to know it, too. The little high school boys who come to the house look and look until I think their eyes are going to pop out of their heads.

The bikinis this mother wears have the narrowest brassieres I've ever seen. The panties are little more than what the strippers in a burlesque house wear.

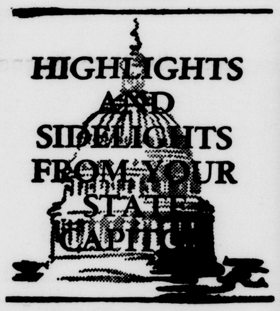
I think it is positively indecent and so does her 14-year-old daughter. Do you feel that this woman is right in her insistence that she can wear anything she pleases in her own home? -- G. R. M.

Dear G. R. M.: I believe a woman who is alone in her home has the right to wear anything she pleases or nothing at all, if she pleases -- provided the shades are down and the doors are bolted. When others are present, however, it is indecent to go around half naked (or in her case seven-eighths naked is more accurate).

I hope this mother will put on a house dress when her children and their friends are home -- before the daughter starts to meet her pals around the corner.

Parents are people -- they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.



ALBANY BID ACCEPTED FOR DIAGNOSTIC CENTER

Missouri communities have been placed in the uncomfortable position of having to bid against each other for pretty high stakes . .. the location of one of 11 new diagnostic centers for the mentally retarded.

So far the Division of Mental Diseases, headed by the able Dr. George Ulett and responsible for site selection, has received letters from 34 Missouri communities expressing an interest in a center.

The tiny Gentry County community of Albany has received the first nod from the division and officials indicate they are hopeful contracts for construction of the new $400,000 facility there can be started by October with completion by next July.

Ulett has set up a pretty tough criteria for communities to meet in order to even be considered. First, the community itself must approach the division expressing an interest. Then, civic leaders must fill out a lengthy questionnaire concerning what the community has to offer, acceptability by the local residents, etc.

In announcing the selection of Albany, Dr. Ulett noted: "One of the paramount considerations for this type of clinic is a humanitarian understanding and acceptance of the problems and needs of the mentally handicapped. In this respect, Albany presented a progressive point of view."

Albany also presented the state with a tract of land (for free) and indicated that $25,000 in local donations would be made available as a further inducement of its selection.

The latter, officials indicate, didn't really play an important role in Albany being chosen, it was merely icing on the cake.

When queried as to whether other towns seeking to be named as sites for the other 10 clinics would have to follow suit, a division spokesman replied in the negative.

Further prompting through local action in Albany came from a lumber dealer who offered to furnish all building materials at cost.

The benefits of being selected as a clinic site are many, with the possibility of providing many local jobs, with the effect of increasing local payrolls, local shopping and in general pulling up a small community by its bootstraps.

STATE GOVERNMENT GROWTH REFLECTED BY BLUE BOOK

The first official manual of the state of Missouri (commonly known as the Blue Book) appeared in 1878 and contained 72 pages, which is about twice the number of pages found in the present edition's table of contents.

Back then, however, the Blue Book was neither blue nor official. It was compiled by Secretary of State Michael K. McGrath but was published and sold as a private venture. The first editions even contained some advertising.

Since that time, the number of state employes has grown by leaps and bounds and the Blue Book has kept pace. The 1963-64 edition, containing well over 1,500 pages, had a printing of 40,000 at a cost in excess of $4 each. Secretary of State James C. (Jimmy) Kirkpatrick reports the latest count shows only 20 books left.

During the last legislature, Kirkpatrick proposed publication of a condensed version (200 pages) which would cost less than 90 cents and would be made available to high school students studying Missouri government. The measure passed the House and ended up in the logjam of the Senate in the wanning days of the session.

"We think this (the condensed version) would fulfill a definite need and result in wider knowledge of state government among high school students," Kirkpatrick commented.

At least two other states issue volumes such as that proposed by the Secretary of State and these are well liked, apparently.

Currently, each high school in Missouri receives one copy of the Blue Book as do the countless thousands of state, county, and city government officials. Under Kirkpatrick's proposal the condensed version would contain only the most important items, omitting the long rolls of state employes and other trivia. However, there would be published the regular Blue Book for official use.

Incidentally, Kirkpatrick has diligently searched the state for old copies of the Blue Book and has gathered together what is believed to be the only complete set in existence.

HEARNES SIGNS BILL SETTING HOUSE SIZE

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has made official the number of members in Missouri's next House of Representatives (168) but the action will be meaningless unless voters endorse the reapportionment proposals in the constitutional amendment election August 17.

If the proposal is rejected, Hearnes has indicated that he will have little choice but to call the Assembly back into special session to dig into the problem anew. Hanging over all of this, of course, is the approval which also must come from federal courts of Missouri's effort at complying with the supreme court's one-man-one-vote ruling.

In Missouri, after a day's fishing beer's the one... for good taste, good fun
Wherever you fish for sport—on the ocean, by the booming surf, or on some quiet country pond, it's great at the end of the day to head for a rewarding glass of beer. While you're talking over the ones that got away, or pan-frying the ones that didn't, you enjoy the hearty taste and cool refreshment only a glass of beer can give you so well. Yes, whatever your sport—bowling or strolling, golfing or gardening—a frosty glass of beer makes a naturally great accompaniment.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

TUESDAY, JULY 20, 1965

Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it. (Revelation 3:8)

PRAYER: Help us, O Father, to be deeply sensitive to the needs of others about us. Help us to see the opportunities these very needs bring us for helpful service. We ask in the name of Christ, who said, "I am the door of the sheep." Amen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that whenever a couple is divorced, if the husband gets the children it is assumed that:

(1) He caught her under the worst possible circumstances or

(2) She is a tramp who didn't want to be bothered with the children or

(3) She is mentally unstable and/or an alcholic.

I would like to dispel these notions once and for all, and I am well qualified to do so since I'm a divorcee who is not a tramp, was not caught, nor am I incompetent or alcoholic. I gave up my children simply because I felt they would be better off with their father.

My husband and I never got along. I married him to please a socially ambitious mother. The children adore their father. They tolerate me. They think I am weak, insecure and addlebrained. They think their father is strong, brilliant and capable. I have never been able to control them. Whatever their father says is gospel.

When we split up several months ago my husband said, "Shall we ask the children with whom they want to live?" (They are 15, 13 and 12.) I replied, "No, I couldn't bear the humiliation of having them choose. Let's tell them they will live with their father." That settled it and I'm sure they were relieved.

So, here's a different kind of letter for your column, Ann Landers. Label it "Education." Sincerely yours. -- ODD WOMAN OUT

Dear Woman: You do not sound weak, insecure or addlebrained to me, but you have sadly underestimated yourself. Good luck in making a new life -- and thanks for the "education."

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing because my 14-year-old niece asked me to. I don't know the answer but I'm hoping you will.

My niece is a very sweet person and has many friends, both girls and boys. They are allowed to come to the house to sing, dance, play records and just visit, which I think is perfectly fine. The problem is the girl's mother.

She's in her middle 30's and has five children. The woman wears a bikini from the first day of spring until snow hits the ground. She knows she has an outstanding figure and apparently she wants everyone else to know it, too. The little high school boys who come to the house look and look until I think their eyes are going to pop out of their heads.

The bikinis this mother wears have the narrowest brassieres I've ever seen. The panties are little more than what the strippers in a burlesque house wear.

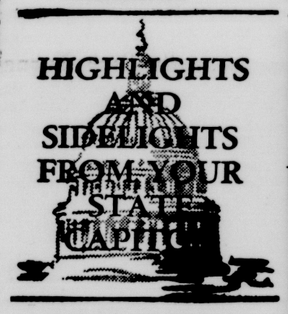
I think it is positively indecent and so does her 14-year-old daughter. Do you feel that this woman is right in her insistence that she can wear anything she pleases in her own home? -- G. R. M.

Dear G. R. M.: I believe a woman who is alone in her home has the right to wear anything she pleases or nothing at all, if she pleases -- provided the shades are down and the doors are bolted. When others are present, however, it is indecent to go around half naked (or in her case seven-eighths naked is more accurate).

I hope this mother will put on a house dress when her children and their friends are home -- before the daughter starts to meet her pals around the corner.

Parents are people -- they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.



ALBANY BID ACCEPTED FOR DIAGNOSTIC CENTER

Missouri communities have been placed in the uncomfortable position of having to bid against each other for pretty high stakes . .. the location of one of 11 new diagnostic centers for the mentally retarded.

So far the Division of Mental Diseases, headed by the able Dr. George Ulett and responsible for site selection, has received letters from 34 Missouri communities expressing an interest in a center.

The tiny Gentry County community of Albany has received the first nod from the division and officials indicate they are hopeful contracts for construction of the new $400,000 facility there can be started by October with completion by next July.

Ulett has set up a pretty tough criteria for communities to meet in order to even be considered. First, the community itself must approach the division expressing an interest. Then, civic leaders must fill out a lengthy questionnaire concerning what the community has to offer, acceptability by the local residents, etc.

In announcing the selection of Albany, Dr. Ulett noted: "One of the paramount considerations for this type of clinic is a humanitarian understanding and acceptance of the problems and needs of the mentally handicapped. In this respect, Albany presented a progressive point of view."

Albany also presented the state with a tract of land (for free) and indicated that $25,000 in local donations would be made available as a further inducement of its selection.

The latter, officials indicate, didn't really play an important role in Albany being chosen, it was merely icing on the cake.

When queried as to whether other towns seeking to be named as sites for the other 10 clinics would have to follow suit, a division spokesman replied in the negative.

Further prompting through local action in Albany came from a lumber dealer who offered to furnish all building materials at cost.

The benefits of being selected as a clinic site are many, with the possibility of providing many local jobs, with the effect of increasing local payrolls, local shopping and in general pulling up a small community by its bootstraps.

STATE GOVERNMENT GROWTH REFLECTED BY BLUE BOOK

The first official manual of the state of Missouri (commonly known as the Blue Book) appeared in 1878 and contained 72 pages, which is about twice the number of pages found in the present edition's table of contents.

Back then, however, the Blue Book was neither blue nor official. It was compiled by Secretary of State Michael K. McGrath but was published and sold as a private venture. The first editions even contained some advertising.

Since that time, the number of state employes has grown by leaps and bounds and the Blue Book has kept pace. The 1963-64 edition, containing well over 1,500 pages, had a printing of 40,000 at a cost in excess of $4 each. Secretary of State James C. (Jimmy) Kirkpatrick reports the latest count shows only 20 books left.

During the last legislature, Kirkpatrick proposed publication of a condensed version (200 pages) which would cost less than 90 cents and would be made available to high school students studying Missouri government. The measure passed the House and ended up in the logjam of the Senate in the wanning days of the session.

"We think this (the condensed version) would fulfill a definite need and result in wider knowledge of state government among high school students," Kirkpatrick commented.

At least two other states issue volumes such as that proposed by the Secretary of State and these are well liked, apparently.

Currently, each high school in Missouri receives one copy of the Blue Book as do the countless thousands of state, county, and city government officials. Under Kirkpatrick's proposal the condensed version would contain only the most important items, omitting the long rolls of state employes and other trivia. However, there would be published the regular Blue Book for official use.

Incidentally, Kirkpatrick has diligently searched the state for old copies of the Blue Book and has gathered together what is believed to be the only complete set in existence.

HEARNES SIGNS BILL SETTING HOUSE SIZE

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has made official the number of members in Missouri's next House of Representatives (168) but the action will be meaningless unless voters endorse the reapportionment proposals in the constitutional amendment election August 17.

If the proposal is rejected, Hearnes has indicated that he will have little choice but to call the Assembly back into special session to dig into the problem anew. Hanging over all of this, of course, is the approval which also must come from federal courts of Missouri's effort at complying with the supreme court's one-man-one-vote ruling.

In Missouri, after a day's fishing beer's the one... for good taste, good fun

Wherever you fish for sport—on the ocean, by the booming surf, or on some quiet country pond, it's great at the end of the day to head for a rewarding glass of beer. While you're talking over the ones that got away, or pan-frying the ones that didn't, you enjoy the hearty taste and cool refreshment only a glass of beer can give you so well. Yes, whatever your sport—bowling or strolling, golfing or gardening—a frosty glass of beer makes a naturally great accompaniment.

Senate Passes GI Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed an administration-opposed "cold war" GI Bill of Rights measure. The issue of educational allowances and home loan benefits for post-Korean veterans now is up to the House.

The Senate rejected Monday Republican proposals to restrict the aid to veterans of combat zone service and then passed the bill, 69 to 17. The House failed to act on a similar Senate measure in 1959, but Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., told reporters Chairman Olin E. Teague, D-Tex., of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, has announced plans to hold early hearings on the new bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield indicated he expects favorable House action this year, when thousands are serving in Viet Nam.

Mansfield supported the bill, although the Budget Bureau, Defense Department and Veterans Administration opposed it.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., voted for the measure on final passage, expressing hope that the House will convert it "into the Viet Nam GI Bill we so badly need."

He had participated in efforts to restrict the benefits to men who served in areas of hostilities. An amendment along these lines, offered by Sen. Leverett Saltonstll of Massachusetts and other Republicans, lost, 52 to 36.

The bill covers all veterans serving from Jan. 31, 1965 - the declared termination date for establishing eligibility under the previous Korean GI Bill -- to July 1, 1967, the termination date of the compulsory draft law recently extended by Congress.

Eligibility for education allowances, $110 a month for bachelors, $135 for veterans with one dependent and $160 a month for veterans with more than one dependent, would be conditioned on more than 180 days of active duty or discharge for service - connected disability.

The same eligibility would apply for applicants for loans and guarantees for the purchase of homes and livestock. If a serviceman dies from service-connected disabilities, his widow could apply for such loans and guarantees.

The education allowance would provide 1 1/2 days of school aid for each day of active service, but with an over-all limit of 36 months.

The loan features would not provide aid in starting businesses - except for the help in acquiring farms and livestock - as did the earlier GI bills.

The government would guarantee 60 per cent of loans from banks and others up to $7,500 on residential real estate, and would provide a 50 per cent guarantee up to $4,000 on non-residential real estate.

Assigned to Battalion

I. CORPS, KOREA -- Army PFC Eddie E. Faire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Faire, 123 West Main St., East Prairie, Mo., has been assigned to the 11th engineer battalion in Korea.

Faire is a cook in the battalion. He entered the army in January of 1964 and completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

The 18-year-old soldier attended East Prairie high school.

Dirksen Faces Battle on His Remap Plan

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Everett M. Dirksen today carries his fight for a constitutional amendment on legislative reapportionment to the apparently equally divided Senate Judiciary Committee.

Barring last-minute shifts in position, the prospects pointed to an 8-8 tie vote. This would deny Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, the majority support he needs to bring the issue before the Senate itself.

Conceding the possibility of such an outcome, Dirksen reiterated to reporters his determination to get Senate action on the proposed amendment on which President Johnson has made no public statement but which Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey is actively fighting.

"I am a determined man," Dirksen told reporters. He would not indicate how he would overcome a committee setback. But he is at liberty any time to move to substitute the proposal for any measure now on the Senate calendar.

Dirksen wouldn't speculate whether a threatened filibuster by liberal opponents of the reapportionment proposal would delay the Labor Day adjournment of Congress he and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield are seeking.

Dirksen and Mansfield expect to take up that matter at a meeting Thursday or Friday with Johnson. The Republican leader observed that up to this point Johnson has given no indication he would be willing to let some of his legislative proposals go over until next year's session.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., apparently destroyed Dirksen's chances for a favorable committee vote on the Illinois senator's proposed reapportionment amendment when he offered a revised version of it.

Javits announced that if his substitute is rejected, he will vote against Dirksen's version in committee.

Both the Dirksen and Javits proposals would permit the voters of each state to decide whether they want one house of their legislature apportioned on other than the population basis ordered by the Supreme Courts in its one-man, one-vote decision.

But Javits' version would keep the court in control of all reapportionment actions by requiring that any plan must take population into account as one of its factors and must bear "a reasonable relationship to the needs of the state."

Address MFA

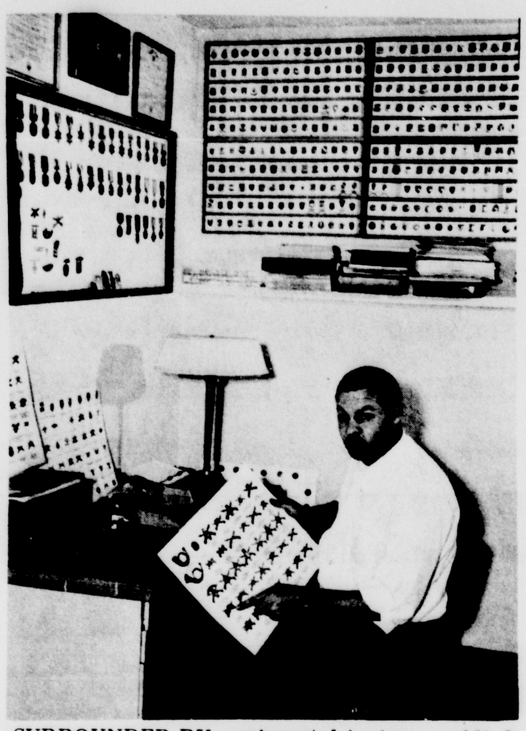
COLUMBIA, Mo. AP -- Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman will be principal speaker when the Missouri Farmers Association holds its annual convention Aug. 2 on the campus of Stephens College.

About 6,000 persons are expected to attend sessions of the MFA Womens Progressive Farmers Association during the one-day convention.



SURROUNDED BY regimental insigne and U. S. Armed Forces medals, Todd Wheatley displays a card of devices that have been worn as identifying badges by branches of the armed forces.

Former Sikeston Man Collects Military Insigne

A former Sikestonian and his hobby were featured in an employe publication of the Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., in Sunnyvale, Calif.

Todd Wheatley, who lived in Sikeston from 1926 to 1930 with his parents, Col. and Mrs. E. T. Wheatley, at that time a National Guard instructor, is a collector of military insigne. The Wheatleys' now live in Albuquerque, N. M.

His son's collection, occupying walls in several rooms of his home, includes more than 5,000 insigne medals, and citations.

He is attempting to collect a complete assortment of every item issued by the United States.

"Whenever possible," he said, "I want to know something of the individual to whom the device was awarded. Of equal importance, I want to know something of the histroy of the action, campaign, or war for which the award was made."

The earliest artifact in the collection, a cavalry insignia, dates to 1840.

He has arranged for the collection to go to the West Point museum.

Povoverty War Raises Ruckus

NEW YORK (AP) — The war on poverty is unleashing some combat in the ranks.

Although the over-all drive is rolling ahead, with its operations fast expanding, clashes have erupted behind the main battle front in several communities.

Official and unofficial sectors often have locked in struggles for control. Partisan politics have added to the jousting.

A cross-country Associated Press check indicated, however, that the vast, diversified program generally has moved off to an industrious start in many cities, yielding a growing network of projects for the poor.

"This is a brand-new program and some mistakes are inevitable," says congressman John Brademas, D-Ind., a member of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

In Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Omaha and Albany and Syracuse, N.Y., sharp controversies have embroiled the program.

To varying degrees, tension also has arisen in Detroit, Baltimore, New Jersey, Alabama, the San Francisco Bay area and elsewhere.

"This was a crash program and it certainly has crashed," said Youth Corps Director Howard Henson in Yavapai County, Ariz., after the County Board of Supervisors voted to terminate the program this fall.

Too complicated, they said, and time-consuming.

Mostly, however, the multiphased undertakings, offering federal poverty-fighting funds in municipalities across the nation, took on widening scope and form, despite the outbreaks of internal strife.

Often, these involved power struggles between the dominant political establishments and local community groups.

A complex dispute in Los Angeles over who would administer government funds blocked a planned summer project for underprivileged teen-agers.

The issue also flared around "community action" organizations, set up in poor neighborhoods under the program, to mobilize residents to press for better conditions.

Sometimes, this involved federally financed community groups making protests to City Hall, raising the ire of local officialdom.

Under the program, private as well as public agencies, or both in combination, are eligible to set up aided projects if they meet the requirements. The law requires "maximum feasible participation" of the poor themselves.

Among the various operations: "Job Corps," setting up camps and centers for work and job training; "Neighborhood Youth Corps," providing part-time jobs to keep kids in school; "Head Start," bringing pre-school children up to standard to start school; "Vista," recruiting low-paid volunteers to serve in impoverished sections.

The federal government puts up 90 per cent of costs.

Besides the tug-of-wars over control, there also have been outcries that salaries paid were too high, and snarls over preliminary preparations and proposals which have delayed federal approval.

"We force every community to unite for action against poverty. Otherwise, they don't qualify for federal help," says Holmes Brown, public affairs director for the Office of Economic Opportunity. "Conflict is inevitable."

The "community action" units — intended to open channels for the poor to join in attacking their own problems — have caused the most ferment.

Assailing such an operation in Syracuse, N.Y., City Housing Director William L. McGarry called it "class struggle in the traditional Karl Marx style." And Republican Mayor William F. Walsh charged:

"It tries to pit the poor against everyone else in the community."

However, officials of Syracuse University, which sponsors that program with a $314,000 grant said the charges were false. Program Director Warren C. Haggstrom termed them "a smokescreen" to hide tenant grievances.

Ben Zimmerman, director of Syracuse's Crusade for Opportunity, the city's agency coordinating the bulk of its antipoverty work through a $3.5-million grant, says:

"The worst thing that could happen is for a fight to develop over who 'owns' the poor."

Nearly 200 Work on Youth Corps Projects

NEW MADRID -- Nearly 200 New Madrid County young people are employed in Youth Corps program school and civic projects, according to Bob Pulliam, supervisor - counsellor under the federal program to aid high school age youths during the summer.

Pulliam gave a breakdown of projects being undertaken by the Youth Corps personnel in several towns in the county.

Portageville has its workers building a cement parking lot and sidewalks for their whole school. They will use approximately 1,700 sacks of cement during this ten week project. They have three supervisors and 52 enrollees working at this time.

Risco does not have a project at its school, but they have employed six boys to work on the highway.

Howardville has 20 boys working at their school and various other places in the city. Approximately 12 boys are working in the city digging drainage ditches and doing other city maintenance while the remaining eight are working at the school. The work at the school consists of such things as sanding desks and painting rooms. They have already built a new baseball diamond and they hope to begin a quarter mile track in the near future.

At Lilbourn they have improved their baseball diamond, cut trees, and done general maintenance work at the school. The work at the school included sanding most of the desks and tables and painting rooms. Lilbourn also has several boys working on city parks and streets.

New Madrid employs 56 Youth Corp workers. The girls, under the supervision of Mrs. Dyke, are taking each school building and doing general maintenance such as cleaning and painting most of the rooms and varnishing tables, chairs, and desks. They have already completed work at the New Madrid High School and Junior High. Soon they will have completed the New Madrid Grade School building, then they plan to begin work on the O'Bannon School.

The boys, under Boon's supervision, have built a baseball diamond at the New Madrid High School and are building a track there. They have also done general maintenance work at the O'Bannon School. New Madrid has two lawn mowers that are constantly in use mowing the grounds of the schools and other public property. General maintenance work has been done at the city park and extensive work has been done to the Little League baseball field, including rebuilding the bleachers and painting all the areas around the fence that encloses it.

New Madrid also has around ten boys working for the street department and five are employed by the Light and Power company. A few other students are working in state offices in New Madrid doing secretarial work.

At Morehouse there are approximately 55 students employed. These students have painted and reworked nearly all of the Morehouse public schools. Several of their students have been assigned to do general maintenance work, painting and washing, at the city hall. After this they will build a park recreation building and complete a baseball diamond. Several other students are employed by the city department of Morehouse.

Senate Passes GI Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate has passed an administration-opposed "cold war" GI Bill of Rights measure. The issue of educational allowances and home loan benefits for post-Korean veterans now is up to the House.

The Senate rejected Monday Republican proposals to restrict the aid to veterans of combat zone service and then passed the bill, 69 to 17. The House failed to act on a similar Senate measure in 1959, but Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., told reporters Chairman Olin E. Teague, D-Tex., of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, has announced plans to hold early hearings on the new bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield indicated he expects favorable House action this year, when thousands are serving in Viet Nam.

Mansfield supported the bill, although the Budget Bureau, Defense Department and Veterans Administration opposed it.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., voted for the measure on final passage, expressing hope that the House will convert it "into the Viet Nam GI Bill we so badly need."

He had participated in efforts to restrict the benefits to men who served in areas of hostilities. An amendment along these lines, offered by Sen. Leverett Saltonstll of Massachusetts and other Republicans, lost, 52 to 36.

The bill covers all veterans serving from Jan. 31, 1965 - the declared termination date for establishing eligibility under the previous Korean GI Bill -- to July 1, 1967, the termination date of the compulsory draft law recently extended by Congress.

Eligibility for education allowances, $110 a month for bachelors, $135 for veterans with one dependent and $160 a month for veterans with more than one dependent, would be conditioned on more than 180 days of active duty or discharge for service - connected disability.

The same eligibility would apply for applicants for loans and guarantees for the purchase of homes and livestock. If a serviceman dies from service-connected disabilities, his widow could apply for such loans and guarantees.

The education allowance would provide 1 1/2 days of school aid for each day of active service, but with an over-all limit of 36 months.

The loan features would not provide aid in starting businesses - except for the help in acquiring farms and livestock - as did the earlier GI bills.

The government would guarantee 60 per cent of loans from banks and others up to $7,500 on residential real estate, and would provide a 50 per cent guarantee up to $4,000 on non-residential real estate.

Assigned to Battalion

L CORPS, KOREA -- Army PFC Eddie E. Faire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Faire, 123 West Main St., East Prairie, Mo., has been assigned to the 11th engineer battalion in Korea.

Faire is a cook in the battalion. He entered the army in January of 1964 and completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

The 18-year-old soldier attended East Prairie high school.

Dirksen Faces Battle on His Remap Plan

WASHINGTON AP -- Sen. Everett M. Dirksen today carries his fight for a constitutional amendment on legislative reapportionment to the apparently equally divided Senate Judiciary Committee.

Barring last-minute shifts in position, the prospects pointed to an 8-8 tie vote. This would deny Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader, the majority support he needs to bring the issue before the Senate itself.

Conceding the possibility of such an outcome, Dirksen reiterated to reporters his determination to get Senate action on the proposed amendment on which President Johnson has made no public statement but which Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey is actively fighting.

"I am a determined man," Dirksen told reporters. He would not indicate how he would overcome a committee setback. But he is at liberty any time to move to substitute the proposal for any measure now on the Senate calendar.

Dirksen wouldn't speculate whether a threatened filibuster by liberal opponents of the reapportionment proposal would delay the Labor Day adjournment of Congress he and Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield are seeking.

Dirksen and Mansfield expect to take up that matter at a meeting Thursday or Friday with Johnson. The Republican leader observed that up to this point Johnson has given no indication he would be willing to let some of his legislative proposals go over until next year's session.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., apparently destroyed Dirksen's chances for a favorable committee vote on the Illinois senator's proposed reapportionment amendment when he offered a revised version of it.

Javits announced that if his substitute is rejected, he will vote against Dirksen's version in committee.

Both the Dirksen and Javits proposals would permit the voters of each state to decide whether they want one house of their legislature apportioned on other than the population basis ordered by the Supreme Courts in its one-man, one-vote decision.

But Javits' version would keep the court in control of all reapportionment actions by requiring that any plan must take population into account as one of its factors and must bear "a reasonable relationship to the needs of the state."

UNTIDY TIE

I cleaned his spotted neckties;
It was no small maneuver,
Can someone now please tell me
What removes the spot remover?

Nearly 200 Work on Youth Corps Projects

NEW MADRID -- Nearly 200 New Madrid County young people are employed in Youth Corps program school and civic projects, according to Bob Pulliam, supervisor - counsellor under the federal program to aid high school age youths during the summer.

Pulliam gave a breakdown of projects being undertaken by the Youth Corps personnel in several towns in the county.

Portageville has its workers building a cement parking lot and sidewalks for their whole school. They will use approximately 1,700 sacks of cement during this ten week project. They have three supervisors and 52 enrollees working at this time.

Risco does not have a project at its school, but they have employed six boys to work on the highway.

Howardville has 20 boys working at their school and various other places in the city. Approximately 12 boys are working in the city digging drainage ditches and doing other city maintenance while the remaining eight are working at the school. The work at the school consists of such things as sanding desks and painting rooms. They have already built a new baseball diamond and they hope to begin a quarter mile track in the near future.

At Lilbourn they have improved their baseball diamond, cut trees, and done general maintenance work at the school. The work at the school included sanding most of the desks and tables and painting rooms. Lilbourn also has several boys working on city parks and streets.

New Madrid employs 56 Youth Corp workers. The girls, under the supervision of Mrs. Dyke, are taking each school building and doing general maintenance such as cleaning and painting most of the rooms and varnishing tables, chairs, and desks. They have already completed work at the New Madrid High School and Junior High. Soon they will have completed the New Madrid Grade School building, then they plan to begin work on the O'Bannon School.

The boys, under Boon's supervision, have built a baseball diamond at the New Madrid High School and are building a track there. They have also done general maintenance work at the O'Bannon School. New Madrid has two lawn mowers that are constantly in use mowing the grounds of the schools and other public property. General maintenance work has been done at the city park and extensive work has been done to the Little League baseball field, including rebuilding the bleachers and painting all the areas around the fence that encloses it.

New Madrid also has around ten boys working for the street department and five are employed by the Light and Power company. A few other students are working in state offices in New Madrid doing secretarial work.

At Morehouse there are approximately 55 students employed. These students have painted and reworked nearly all of the Morehouse public schools. Several of their students have been assigned to do general maintenance work, painting and washing, at the city hall. After this they will build a park recreation building and complete a baseball diamond. Several other students are employed by the city department of Morehouse.

During a first-aid course for Girl Scouts, the question was asked, "What would you do if a child swallowed a house key?" One girl's reply: "I'd climb in through the window." —Modern Medicine

"If need be, we'll make every tree a school!"

Mexico's Minister of Education made this bold statement of an ambitious program in 1958.

In Mexico, where lumber is scarce and trees are protected with stringent modern forestry programs, the statement has even more meaning.

And Mexico has put that meaning into action. Our modern neighbor spends a quarter of its national budget on education. Mexico is in the middle of a program to build 39,000 new classrooms and train 67,000 new teachers by 1970 . . . and they're well ahead of schedule.

From 3,000 years of civilized traditions, Mexico has built a strong present . . . and they're teaching the youngsters how to build a strong future.

Knowledge of our modern neighbor is important in today's world. Add to your knowledge . . . send for the free booklet "Know Mexico", Box 1900, New York, 10019.
